

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE WALLACE COLLECTION, consisting of paintings, water-colour drawings, miniatures, illuminations, bronzes, armour and arms, furniture, porcelain and faïence, enamels, snuff boxes, ivories, medals, glass, and other precious works of art, was bequeathed by the late Lady Wallace to the British nation under her will, bearing date the 23rd of May, 1894. The Testatrix died on the 16th of February, 1897. The main terms of the bequest were the following :—

The collection was bequeathed on the condition that the Government for the time being should agree to give a site in a central part of London, and build thereon a special museum to contain it, and it was provided that the said collection should always be kept together, unmixed with other objects of art, and should be styled "The Wallace Collection."

The bequest was expressly made to include the Louis Quatorze balustrade to the Great Staircase at Hertford House, which was to be used in the new museum to be erected for the display of the collection. The bequest was made subject to the further condition that Her Majesty's Government should nominate Mr. John Murray Scott to be one of the Trustees of the collection for the Nation, and also that for the time (not exceeding a period of four years from the decease of the Testatrix) during which it should remain at Hertford House, it should be at the risk and peril of Her Majesty's Government, by whom was also to be defrayed the cost of superintendence and preservation in respect of the same. As a preliminary to the consideration of the main question whether the Wallace Collection should be permanently established at Hertford House, or, as directed in the will of the late Lady Wallace, in a new museum to be constructed for the express purpose of containing it, a case was submitted to the Law Officers of the Crown. They gave the opinion that, although the purchase and adaptation of Hertford House could not be considered a strict compliance with the terms of the bequest, yet, if the residuary legatee, Mr. Murray Scott—he being, as it was shown, the only person who could make a claim in this respect under the Will—should concur in the arrangement, and bind himself and his legal representatives to treat the purchase and adaptation of Hertford House as a fulfilment of the condition in the same, then the Government would be justified in effecting such purchase and adaptation. Mr. John Murray Scott formally concurred in the adoption of this arrangement by Her Majesty's Government.

Under the Treasury Minute of 3rd May, 1897, a Committee was appointed, consisting of The Right Honourable the Marquis of Lansdowne, K.G., G.C.M.G., G.C.S.I. (Chairman); The Right Honourable Sir William Vernon Harcourt, M.P.; Sir Edward J. Poynter, P.R.A.; Mr. Algernon Bertram Freeman Mitford, C.B.; Sir Francis Mowatt, K.C.B.; Mr. Walter Armstrong, Director of the National Gallery of Ireland; Mr. Alfred O. de Rothschild; Mr. Alfred Waterhouse, R.A., LL.D., to consider "where, in what manner, and at what probable cost, provision might best be made for the housing and exhibition of the art collection recently bequeathed to the nation by Lady Wallace, and to make any recommendations that might seem fit to them as to the constitution of the Trust in which the collection should be vested." The Committee submitted in their Report, presented to both Houses of Parliament in July, 1897, that, in their opinion, Her Majesty's Government would be well advised if they were to arrange that the collection should be allowed to remain at Hertford House subject to the condition that the galleries and apartments should be suitably altered for the purpose. They therein recorded their conclusions to the effect that such an arrangement would be in accordance with the terms of the bequest, and would, in the view of the Executors, give effect to the wishes of the Testatrix; that it would, more than any other arrangement, preserve the distinctive character of the collection ; that it would be much the least costly of the alternatives suggested ; that it would avoid the risks inseparable from removal and re-arrangement ; that it would provide a museum which, owing to its complete detachment from other buildings, would be specially free from risk of fire ; and finally that it would avoid the necessity for delay, and afford the public an opportunity of entering into the enjoyment of the priceless collection bequeathed to the Nation within a shorter time than under the alternative scheme.

Sir E. J. Poynter, not being in complete agreement with the Committee on certain points, made a separate Report, pointing out the advantages which, in his opinion, would result from the housing of the Wallace Collection in a new building to be constructed in the vicinity of the National Gallery.

In addition to Mr. John Murray Scott (now Sir John Murray Scott, Bart.), who had been specially nominated under the Will, the following Trustees were appointed by Treasury Minute dated 28th July, 1897, to take over the Wallace Collection :—The Right Honourable the Earl of Rosebery, K.G., K.T. ; The Right Honourable Sir Edward Malet, G.C.B., G.C.M.G. ; Sir John Stirling Maxwell, Bart., M.P. ; Major-General Sir Arthur E. A. Ellis, K.C.V.O., C.S.I. ; Alfred O. de Rothschild, Esq. ; A. B. Freeman Mitford, Esq., C.B. Under the Treasury Minute of that date, Mr. Claude Phillips was appointed Keeper of the Wallace Collection.

The Wallace Collection was brought together in the main by Francis Charles, third Marquess, and Richard, fourth Marquess of Hertford. It was, however, largely added to, and in many essential respects, re-organised by the late Sir Richard Wallace, to whom it had passed by bequest. The European armoury, unique of its kind in England, is entirely his creation. The Masters of the French School of Painting of the eighteenth century, and especially Watteau, Lancret, Pater, Le Moine, Oudry, Nattier, Boucher, Fragonard, and Greuze, are represented as they are in no public or private gallery in Europe, except that of the Louvre, which is, under this head, surpassed in several important particulars by the Wallace Collection. The Italian pictures are few, but of fine quality, and include important works by Cima da Conegliano, Bernardino Luini, Andrea del Sarto, and Titian, besides interesting fragments detached from frescoes of the Lombard and other Italian Schools. A special feature of the collection is the important series of canvases by Canaletto and his School and the unsurpassed group of similar pictures by Francesco Guardi. The works of the Spanish School include groups of paintings by Velasquez and Murillo and a picture by Alonso Cano. Among the great artists of Flanders, Rubens, Van Dyck, Cornelis de Vos, Jordaens, Gonzales Coques, Adriaan Brouwer, David Teniers the Younger, and many others are magnificently represented. Illustrating the Dutch School in its prime there are famous canvases by Rembrandt, Frans Hals, Van der Helst, Adriaan and Isack van Ostade, Adriaan and Willem Van de Velde, Pieter de Hooch, Terborch, Metsu, Philips Wouwerman, Jacob van Ruysdael, Hobbema, Berchem, Paul Potter, Aalbert Cuyp, Jan Davids de Heem, Jan Baptist Weenix, Jan Weenix, Van Haysum, and many others. The English School is represented by some of the masterpieces of Reynolds and Gainsborough, besides works by Romney, Hoppner, Lawrence, Turner, Bonington, Wilkie, Clarkson, Stanfield, David Roberts, and others. Among the celebrated French artists of the nineteenth century unrepresented in any other public gallery in London are Prud'hon, Géricault, Gros, Delacroix, Léopold Robert, Scheffer, Decamps, Marilhat, Horace Vernet, Couture, Meissonier, Paul Delaroche, Gérôme, Corot, Théodore Rousseau, Troyon, Jules Dupré, and Diaz. The collection comprises rare examples of the Italian majolica of Gubbio, Urbino, Pesaro, Castel Durante, and Caffaggiolo; Limoges and other enamels; ivories and other precious objects. The collection of Sèvres porcelain is among the finest in the world; it can only be paralleled with those of His Majesty the King at Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace. The collection of French snuff boxes of the eighteenth century is also exceptional. The miniatures comprise some examples by the most renowned artists of the English and foreign schools. The sculpture includes, besides bronzes of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, works of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries by Warin, Coysevox, Girardon, Bouchardon, Falconet, Houdon, and others. The collection of French furniture of all kinds, of clocks, garnitures, candelabra, candlesticks, bronzes, and ornamental objects of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries stands alone; no single collection in France or England, whether public or private, affords such opportunity for the study of this branch of decorative art.

An important selection from the pictures now included in the Wallace Collection was exhibited by the then Marquis of Hertford at the Manchester Fine Arts Exhibition of 1857, in a gallery specially set aside for the purpose. After the siege of Paris in 1870-71, the French section of the collection was brought over to England by the late Sir Richard Wallace. The whole of it, as it then existed, with the exception of certain canvases too large for exhibition, was lent by him to the new Bethnal Green Branch of the South Kensington Museum, which it completely filled. This public exhibition at Bethnal Green lasted from June 1872 until April 1875. On or about the latter date, the collections were restored to Hertford House, which had been in the meantime largely altered and partially reconstructed in order to receive them. They were then re-arranged under the personal supervision of the late Sir Richard Wallace and have from that time remained permanently at Hertford House; loans of important pictures being made, however, from time to time to the Winter Exhibitions of Old Masters brought together by the Royal Academy. As a consequence of the recommendations of the Committee, already cited, a partial reconstruction of Hertford House has been carried out, among the main features of which are the building, on the site of the stables, of a series of four large galleries, to contain the European and Oriental Armouries, and the construction, on the first floor, of the top-lighted gallery, which now contains French pictures and furniture of the eighteenth century. The arrangement of the collections in the galleries, as altered and reconstructed, is an entirely new one.

BECCAFUMI (DOMENICO).

Sienese School. Born in the neighbourhood of Siena in 1486. Died in that city in May, 1551. Influenced by Perugino, then by the contemporary Sienese School, and by Michelangelo.

Beccafumi was one of the foremost Sienese painters of the 16th century. He studied the works of Raphael and Michelangelo in Rome, but worked chiefly in his native city, and there competed with Sodoma and Girolamo del Pacchia. Among the most important of Beccafumi's later works are the cartoons for a large portion of the marble mosaic pavement of Siena Cathedral, and a vast ceiling in the Palazzo Pubblico of that city. His works are very rare in England. At the National Gallery he is represented by a curious canvas "Esther before Ahasuerus," and in the collection of Mr. R. H. Benson by two brilliant late productions "The Martyrdom of St. Lucy" and "The Flight of Clelia." On the great staircase at the Victoria and Albert Museum are two "Allegorical Figures" attributable to Beccafumi.

Wils at Haarlem, and of Nicolas Moyaert and J. B. Weenix at Amsterdam. He probably visited Italy. Domiciled at Haarlem, and afterwards at Amsterdam.

BIANCHI (FRANCESCO BIANCHI FERRARI).

Modenese School. Born — (?). Died in 1510. This scarce master, whose works have not as yet been definitively classified, has recently been studied in the Archivio Storico dell' Arte by the Italian critic, Commendatore Adolfo Venturi. Bianchi's last and best authenticated work is "The Annunciation" in the Estense Gallery at Modena, once ascribed to Francesco Francia. Another characteristic work is the altarpiece "The Virgin and Child with St. Jerome and St. Sebastian" in S. Pietro at Modena, formerly ascribed to Pellegrino Munari. Also ascribed to Bianchi, but differing appreciably from these works in general style and in the facial type of the figures, is the important "Virgin and Child between Saints" of the Louvre.

Probably a late work of the master, since it resembles in many particulars the two works firstly above referred to.

BOILLY (LOUIS-LÉOPOLD).

French School. Born at La Bassée, near Lille, in 1761. Pupil of his father. Died at Paris in 1845, at the age of 84. His earlier genre pieces illustrate the transition between the 18th and the 19th centuries, and are still coloured by the peculiar sentimentality of the former period. He was a naive and sympathetic observer of contemporary types and manners. The most remarkable collection of Boilly's works is that in the Museum at Lille. Characteristic paintings by him are to be found also in the Louvre, and in the collections of many Parisian amateurs.

BOL (FERDINAND).

Dutch School. Born at Dordrecht in June, 1616. Buried at Amsterdam on the 24th July, 1680. Bol was one of the most prominent and successful among the pupils of Rembrandt. In his later years he to some extent emancipated himself from this influence, and adopted a more colourless and conventional style. Bol established himself at Amsterdam before 1640.

BONHEUR (MARIE-ROSA).

French School. Born at Bordeaux on the 22nd March, 1822. Died at By on the 26th May, 1899. Pupil of her father and of Léon Cogniet. Rosa Bonheur is the most popular and various painter of animals of the modern French School, and her vogue has been even greater in England than in her native country. As an artist she cannot be placed in the category which includes such masters as Brascassat and Troyon. Among her most important and successful works of large dimensions are to be counted "The Horse Fair" (Metropolitan Museum of New York); "Le Labourage Nivernais" (Luxembourg); and "La Fension."

BONINGTON (RICHARD PARKES).

British School. Born at Arnold, near Nottingham, on the 25th October, 1801. Bonington went to Paris at the age of fifteen, and studied in the Louvre. He was a student at the École des Beaux-Arts and in the atelier of Baron Gros, and thus belongs, by training, more to the French than to the British School. He visited Italy, and worked especially at Venice. Bonington died in London on the 23rd September, 1828, before he had completed his twenty-seventh year. There was an interchange of influence between the English painter and Delacroix, arising naturally out of their friendship and personal intercourse. The Wallace Collection contains the most complete series of his works, both in oils and water-colours. He is represented in the National Gallery, the Victoria and Albert Museum, the Louvre, and in private collections, both in England and France.

BOUCHER (FRANÇOIS).

French School. Born at Paris in 1704; died there in 1770. Pupil of François Le Moine, and influenced also in some degree by Watteau, a number of whose paintings and drawings he etched, at the request of M. de Julienne, for the sumptuous volumes which the latter devoted to the reproduction of his dead friend's works. Boucher, unable to secure the Prix de Rome, nevertheless made the journey to Italy on his own account in the company of Carle van Loo. He returned to Paris in 1731, and on the 30th January, 1734, was received at the Académie Royale, on presentation of the picture "Rinaldo and Armida" which is now in the Louvre. Boucher, who had meanwhile carried off in succession all the Academic and official distinctions within reach of the court painter, succeeded Carle van Loo in 1765 as premier peintre du roi, and became also Director of the Academy and Inspector of the Tapestry Manufactory of Beauvais. This was the climax of a career which was in a great measure shaped by the patronage of the Marquise de Pompadour, who introduced Boucher and his work at the Court of Louis XV., placed his "Forges de Vulcain" in the private room of the monarch at Marly, purchased, among many other things, the famous "Lever du Soleil" and "Coucher du Soleil" now in this collection, and promoted his interests in every way. The painter was not only the protégé but the intimate companion of Madame de Pompadour, and with him she discussed, not only all matters connected with art and virtuosity, but her tastes and her plans generally. He initiated the royal favourite into the mysteries of etching, and superintended the publication of a volume which appeared in her name with a series of etched plates after the engraved stones of Guay, "Graveur du Roy." Her protection established him in a position so commanding that the royal favour was continued even after her death, and endured indeed to the termination of the popular master's career. Boucher, though he was essentially by inclination a man of pleasure, was the hardest and most assiduous of workers, devoting ten hours a day to painting and drawing, and producing thus an incredible mass of work, of which a large proportion was necessarily hasty and perfunctory. He was the typical painter-decorator of the Louis Quinze period, which he did so much to shape in art, and of which his style was a perfect embodiment, both in its brilliant attractiveness and its superficiality. To be judged fairly, his gay, daring, and singularly skilful performances—mainly, it should be remembered, decorative in intention—must be taken not alone, but, as they are seen in the Wallace Collection, in conjunction with the furniture, the tapestries, the bronzes, the porcelain, and objects of art of his time. In his most typical productions Boucher is, what the decorator of great spaces should be, a colourist not so much subtle and profound as frank, brilliant, and fresh to the point of crudeness—a designer of astonishing freedom, variety, and inventiveness. At his best he must be deemed one of the most brilliant and accomplished executants of the eighteenth century; and, more than this, in his merits as in his faults, one of the most characteristically French among the French masters. Even at his worst he cannot be said to deserve the unmeasured strictures of Diderot, who from the point of view of the moralist rather than that of the art-critic, covered his conceptions, his works, and his person with ridicule and contempt. And yet the same famous writer, in the earlier stages of Greuze's career, could find nothing but praise for the sentimental morality, the false modesty, and false sensibility of that accomplished yet much overrated master, whose work is full of suggestiveness and arrière-pensée, whereas that of Boucher is redeemed by the perfect frankness of the effort to amuse the eye and appeal to the senses.

No gallery—not even the Louvre itself—can vie with the Wallace Collection in the number and importance of its Bouchers. The Swedish National Gallery at Stockholm is one of the best endowed of the European Galleries outside France. It contains the famous “Naissance et Triomphe de Venus,” and several other fine examples of the master. Besides the Louvre, the museums of Angers, Nancy, and Tours contain notable canvases from his hand. The four dessus de porte painted for the Hôtel de Soubise (now Palais des Archives Nationales) are celebrated. Among the private collections containing fine Bouchers may be particularly mentioned that of Baron Edmond de Rothschild, in Paris, and those of Miss Alice de Rothschild and Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, in England.

This picture was in 1782 in the sale of the collection of the Marquis de Marigny, brother of Madame de Pompadour, who became afterwards Marquis de Ménéars. It was on that occasion purchased for the very small sum of 154 livres by the Duc de Chaulnes, who had been engaged to Alexandrine, daughter of Madame de Pompadour.

The marble group in the background suggests the impetuous advances of young Love, accepted yet moderated by a discreet Nymph. Other portraits of Madame de Pompadour from the same hand, but of wholly different composition, are in the collection of Miss Alice de Rothschild, in the National Gallery of Scotland, in the Jones Bequest Gallery at the Victoria and Albert Museum, and in the collection of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild.

BOURSSE (ESSAYS).

Dutch School. Born at Amsterdam on the 3rd March, 1631. Died at sea on the 16th November, 1672. Boursse is known to have practised his art in Amsterdam from 1656 to 1672. He made several journeys to the East Indies in the service of the East Indian Company. In the month of October, 1672, he started for the Indies on the ship "Reenen," but died on the 16th November, 1672, at sea. He is known to have visited Italy and painted there. His productions, however, as we know them at present, show absolutely no traces of Italian influence. The style of this very rare and highly accomplished master exhibits some affinity to that of Pieter de Hooch and J. Koedyck, and reveals, like the work of those masters, the influence of Rembrandt, though none of the three can properly be said to belong to his immediate school. There are paintings by Boursse in the Ryks-Museum at Amsterdam, in the Berlin Gallery, and in the Suermondt Museum at Aix-la-Chapelle. Dr. A. Bredius, of the Hague, has recently discovered at Warsaw two unsigned, but in his opinion authentic, works from his brush.

BRAMANTINO (BARTOLOMMEO SUARDI, called BRAMANTINO).

Lombard School. Born at Milan (?), about 1450; died after 1526. The pupil first of Vincenzo Foppa, then of the great architect and painter, Bramante, from the connection with whom he acquired the name of Bramantino. He occupied an important position in Milanese art after the departure of Leonardo da Vinci in 1499, and influenced both Luini and Gaudenzio Ferrari. In 1506 Bramantino was called to Rome, and he there painted with Sodoma, in the Stanza della Segnatura of the Vatican, fresco decorations, which were destroyed by order of Julius II. in order to make room for those of Raphael. Bramantino's chief works in oils and fresco are still to be found at Milan, and chiefly in the Brera, the Gallery of the Ambrosiana Library, and the Museum of the Castello there. An admirable "Adoration of the Magi" is in Lady Layard's collection at Venice, and will ultimately find a place in the National Gallery, which at present contains no example from his hand.

It came last from the collection of Vicomte de Tauzia in Paris.

BRASCASSAT (JACQUES-RAYMOND).

Born at Bordeaux in 1804; died at Paris in 1867. He studied chiefly at the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris. This painter practised landscape and historical subjects, but excelled chiefly in the representation of animals.

BRONZINO (ANGELO DI COSIMO, called BRONZINO).

Florentine School. Born at Monticelli, near Florence, in 1502. Died at Florence, on the 23rd November, 1572. Pupil of Raffaellino del Garbo and Jacopo da Pontormo, and influenced by Michelangelo. He practised in Florence, chiefly as a portrait painter. As such he is, notwithstanding the sculptural hardness of his style, the greatest artist produced by Florence during the 16th century, with the exception of Andrea del Sarto, whose comparatively few portraits are among his finest productions.

BROUWER (ADRIAEN).

Dutch-Flemish School. Born in 1605 or 1606, at Oudenarde. Buried at Antwerp, on the 1st February, 1638. Pupil of Frans Hals at Haarlem; painted at Amsterdam, Haarlem, and after 1631 at Antwerp. Brouwer in the passion and vigour of his realism, as well as in the subtlety of his art, more than rivalled his contemporary, David Teniers, the Younger. By far the most important collection of his works is to be found in the Alte Pinakothek at Munich. The Dulwich College Gallery possesses a fine example. There is another in the Ionides Collection bequeathed to the Victoria and Albert Museum. Brouwer is as yet unrepresented in the National Gallery.

This is the copy, on a much reduced scale, of the well-known picture by Cagnacci in the Accademia di San Luca at Rome. The Dresden Gallery possesses a copy on the scale of the original, and also a once popular "Magdalen" doubtfully attributed to him. In the Imperial Gallery at Vienna are two signed pictures by him, "Cleopatra" and "St. Jerome."

CAMPHUYSEN (GOVERT).

Dutch School. Born at Gorkum in 1623 or 1624. Buried at Amsterdam on the 4th July, 1672. Probably the pupil of his elder brother Raphael Camphuysen, by whom there are in the Dresden Gallery two moonlight pieces, one of which is signed "R. Camphuysen." Govert Camphuysen was manifestly influenced by Paul Potter. He worked up to 1651 in Amsterdam; then from 1653 to 1663 in Stockholm as court-painter of King Charles X. and the Queen Dowager, Marie-Eleonore: then again in Amsterdam. A large landscape with figures and cattle, by him is in the Cassel Gallery, where it was formerly ascribed to Paul Potter. In the Hermitage at St. Petersburg are three examples of Govert Camphuysen, of which two bear his signature, while the third has a false signature of Paul Potter.

CANALETTO (GIOVANNI ANTONIO DA CANALE, called CANALETTO).

Venetian School, 18th Century. Born at Venice on the 18th October, 1697; died there on the 20th April, 1768. Pupil of his father, the decorative painter, Bernardo da Canale, and further developed during a sojourn in Rome. A remarkable "View of the Capitol and the Church of Ara Coeli," by him, is in the collection of Lord Leconfield. He practised chiefly at Venice, but in the years 1746 and 1747 was in London. Besides his nephew and pupil, the noted painter Bernardo Bellotto, Canaletto had a number of followers and imitators, whose works have hitherto been classed under his name. The majority of the works here set down to him for the sake of convenience cannot be reckoned as more than school pieces. The most authentic example of his art in the Wallace Collection is No. 498.

CANO (ALONSO).

Spanish School. Born at Granada in Spain on the 19th March, 1601. Died in the same city on the 5th October, 1667. He distinguished himself as painter, sculptor, and architect. Studied painting under Francesco Pacheco and Juan de Castillo at Seville, and sculpture under Juan Martinez Montañes. He practised at Seville, Madrid, and Granada, and in the last-named place founded a school. The most important example of his art to be found in England is a large altar-piece, "The Assumption of the Virgin," in the collection of Sir Francis Cook at Richmond. A curious piece of his late time is the large "Adam and Eve after the Fall," in the collection of Sir John Stirling Maxwell.

CHAMPAIGNE (PHILIPPE DE).

Flemish School. Born at Brussels in 1602. Died at Paris in 1674. He came to Paris in 1621, and so completely acclimatised himself in France that he would perhaps be more correctly described as belonging to the French than the Flemish School. He became the accredited painter of Port Royal and the Jansenists, of many among whom he has left invaluable portraits. In sacred and historical art he is frigidly correct and conscientious, but he attains to a very high degree of merit as a portrait painter; and here, in the gravity and intensity of his characterisation, he still reveals his Flemish origin.

Another authentic likeness of the Archbishop, agreeing exactly in type and characterization with the Munich example, is in the collection of the Rev. Richard Hugh Cholmondeley. Yet another authentic likeness, by or after Vivien, is among the pictures at Buckingham Palace.

CIMA (GIOVANNI BATTISTA, called CIMA DA CONEGLIANO).

Venetian School. Year of birth unknown; that of death believed to be about 1517. He practised at Venice and in the Venetian territory. Cima, though he issued from the elder school of Venice, at the head of which were the Vivarini, was greatly influenced by Giovanni Bellini. He cannot, however, be deemed to have been actually a pupil or even a slavish imitator of that great master. In his earlier and more severe productions, such as the "St. John the Baptist with Saints" (1489) in the Madonna del Orto at Venice, the influence of his elder contemporary, Bartolommeo Montagna, makes itself felt. His chief works are to be found in the churches and the Accademia delle Belle Arti of Venice, in the Brera at Milan, and in the Gallery of Parma. The Berlin Gallery, the National Gallery, the Louvre, the Dresden, Munich, Vienna, Vicenza, and Modena Galleries, and the church at Conegliano also contain examples of his art.

Gallery XVI.

This great panel is one of the most important examples of the Venetian master to be found in England. According to information kindly furnished by Dr. G. Ludwig, it is the central portion of an altarpiece once in the church of S. Rocco in Mestre, near Venice. There was recently discovered by him in the Albertina at Vienna a print of the last century, showing the original arrangement. The wings, on which are depicted the two saints invoked against the plague, St. Sebastian and St. Roch, are now in the museum of Strassburg. The lunette, "The Virgin and Child between St. Dominic and St. Francis," is in the collection of Mr. John Edward Taylor, of Kensington Palace Gardens.

CLAUDE LORRAIN (CLAUDE GELLÉE, called CLAUDE LORRAIN or LE LORRAIN).

French School. Born at Chamagne in Lorraine in 1600. Died at Rome on the 21st November, 1682. The pupil in Rome of Agostino Tassi, and through him influenced by the Carracci and Paul Bril, but still more by the imaginative Italo-German landscapist Adam Elsheimer. He practised chiefly in Rome. The style of poetic and idealised landscape painting which he invented and brought to perfection has never lost its hold on the world. The greatest modern artists, and among them Turner and Corot, have come under his influence. Characteristic examples of his art are to be found at the Doria Palace at Rome, in the Louvre, the Prado Gallery of Madrid the Dresden, Berlin, and Munich Galleries. Some of his best works are in England, in the National Gallery, in the Bridgewater Gallery, at Grosvenor House, and in the collections of the Earl of Radnor, Lord Leconfield, and Lord Wantage. The Liber Studiorum, a portfolio, or book, of landscape drawings preserved—or, as the case may be, specially prepared—by the master as authenticating records of pictures painted by him, and of their purchasers, is in the collection of the Duke of Devonshire at Chatsworth.

CLOUET (School of the).

The two chief painters of this group were Jean Clouet (called Jehannet or Janet), who died in 1540 or 1541, and his more celebrated son, François Clouet, who was born in 1510 and died in 1572. They evolved out of the Flemish method and tradition a genuinely French style in portraiture. By the former may be cited the "Éléonore d'Autriche, Second Consort of François I.," at Hampton Court; by the latter, the large full length "Charles IX." in the Vienna Gallery, the "Elisabeth d'Autriche" and "Charles IX." in the Louvre, and a little panel, "Portrait of a young Prince," in the Antwerp Gallery. A large group of anonymous portrait painters and copyists flourished round these two masters and their contemporary, Corneille de Lyon, who was also of Netherlandish origin, but represented a somewhat different phase of French portraiture. The latter is best to be studied in the Museum of Versailles.

COGNIET (LÉON).

Modern French School. Born at Paris in 1794; died there in 1880. A pupil of Guérin, the pseudo-classic master, who was himself a disciple of David. He afterwards painted military and romantic subjects, and acquired great reputation as a teacher, among his pupils being Robert-Fleury and Meissonier. Cogniet's portrait, in extreme old age—a fine work by his pupil, M. Bonnat—is in the Luxembourg.

COOPER (THOMAS SIDNEY), R.A.

British School. Born at Canterbury on 26th September, 1803, and died on the 7th February, 1902. He studied animal painting in the Netherlands, whence, after a residence of some years, he was driven back to England by the Belgian revolution. He was elected an A.R.A. in 1845 and an R.A. in 1847. His career has been one of well-nigh unexampled duration and industry.

COQUES (GONZALES COQUES or COCKX).

Flemish School. Born at Antwerp in 1618. Died there on the 18th April, 1684. A pupil of Pieter Breughel, the younger, and of the second David Ryckaert, who afterwards became his father-in-law. Gonzales Coques was often, by reason of his popularity as a painter of portraits on a small scale, called "the small Van Dyck." Allowing for the difference in scale, he shows, indeed, much of that master's skill and authority in portraiture, without, however, save on rare occasions, approaching his exquisite distinction. Perhaps the most perfect piece of this class is the small full-length "Portrait of a Spanish Gentleman" at Dorchester House. In 1641 he was elected a member of the Guild of St. Luke, at Antwerp, and, in 1664, he became the president of that Guild. He worked for the Princes of Orange, for Charles I. of England, the Elector of Brandenburg, the Archduke Leopold, and other distinguished patrons. At the Château of Honslaerdycck, which now no longer exists, was, in the last century, to be found a series of life-size compositions by Gonzales Coques, with The History of Cupid and Psyche. This was a commission from the Stadhouder, Prince Frederick-Henry. (Catalogue Raisonné du Musée Royal de la Haye, 1895.)

COROT (JEAN-BAPTISTE-CAMILLE).

French School. Born in Paris on the 20th July, 1796; died there in 1875. Pupil of Michallon and Victor Bertin. Corot, following in the footsteps of the great French landscape painters of the seventeenth century, went to Rome in 1826. His art, with its subtle and entirely personal mode of expression, only by degrees won acceptance in France, and his European fame dates from the last period of his career. Corot's style naturally combines a classic rhythm and harmony, and a perfect felicity in selection and generalisation, with the most profound and loving study of nature. Though he is generally, for the sake of convenience, classed with the so-called Barbizon School, he stands practically alone in modern French art. The picture in the Wallace Collection is at present the only one from his brush to be found in a national museum in the United Kingdom. The Municipal Gallery of Glasgow possesses, however, a fine example of his mature style. The Victoria and Albert Museum will, with the Ionides Collection, enter into possession of canvases by Corot and Jean-François Millet among other modern French masters.

COUTURE (THOMAS).

French School. Born at Senlis in France in 1815. Died in 1879. The pupil of Gros and Paul Delaroche. He won his first and greatest success with the well-known "Décadence des Romains," painted when he was thirty-two years of age, and now in the Louvre. This success was never increased, or even maintained, in later years. Couture's atelier was much frequented by students, especially by foreigners.

This picture, though in composition it is quite different, and represents a different moment in the dramatic action, bears a striking family resemblance to Gérôme's more celebrated rendering of a similar subject, now, in the Musée Condé at Chantilly.

ORIVELLI (CARLO).

Venetian School. Born in the Venetian territory about 1430. Died after 1493. Orivelli issued, in all probability, from the School of Murano, but was in his earlier time strongly influenced by that of Padua. The latter half of the fifteenth century shows no art more intense in conviction than that of Orivelli or more brilliantly decorative after its peculiar fashion; but also none more mannered and excessive in its mode of expression. His finest works are to be found scattered through the Marches of Ancona, in the Brera Gallery at Milan, and in the National Gallery.

No. 527. St. Rock.

Gallery III.

1 ft. 5 in. h. by 4½ in. w.

This small panel must have formed part of a triptych or polyptych. It is in the artist's finest style and shows strong traces of Paduan influence, though the colour is deeper and more glowing than that of any artist issuing direct from the school of Squarcione.

CUYP (AELBERT).

Dutch School. Born in October 1620 at Dordrecht; buried there on the 7th November, 1691. Pupil of his father Jacob Gerritsz Cuyp and strongly influenced by Jan van Goyen. He lived and practised at Dordrecht, different aspects of which picturesque town, all of them crowned by the thickset church-tower which asserts itself from every point of view, continually reappear in his river scenes. Cuyp's masterly treatment, in landscape, of veiled sunlight and the golden glow of afternoon and evening is too well known from familiar examples to need new praise. He also painted horses and cattle, and on occasion still-life, interiors, and portraits. The finest specimens of his art are to be met with in England, and especially in the Royal Collections, at Bridgewater House, Dorchester House, Waddesdon Manor, in the National Gallery, the Wallace Collection, the Dulwich Gallery, and the Collections of the Duke of Bedford, Earl Brownlow, Lord Leconfield, and Mr. Alfred de Rothschild.

DECAMPS (ALEXANDRE-GABRIEL).

French School. Born in Paris on the 3rd March, 1803. Died at Fontaine on the 22nd August, 1860. Pupil of Abel de Pujol. He travelled in the South of France and Italy, and subsequently in the East. Decamps belonged to the Romantic School, and was among the most renowned of the French Orientalist painters. He combines poetic fervour and a true sense of the mystery and splendour of the East with great truthfulness and variety of observation. Especially remarkable is his treatment of local Oriental character, and his interpretation of the phenomena of light and shadow at every moment of the day from dawn to sunset. The collection of paintings and water-colours by Decamps in the Wallace Collection is the finest and most numerous in existence. It is approached only by that of the Musée Condé at Chantilly.

DELACROIX (FERDINAND-VICTOR-EUGÈNE)

French School. Born at Charenton-Saint-Maurice on the 26th April, 1798. Died at Paris in 1863. The pupil of Guérin, of whose artificial style he soon became intolerant. Making a great success at the Salon, first with "La Barque de Dante," in 1822, then with the "Massacre de Scio," in 1824, Delacroix came by degrees to be regarded as the leader of the Romantic painters, whose aim was the substitution of colour, life, and poetry for the frigid Græco-Roman classicality of David's School. Ingres, who sought above all to revive the traditions of Raphael and the Cinquecento, and to express classicality of a truer and more suave type, was the great rival and detractor of the Romantic painter. Delacroix's most important works are in the Louvre, the Salon du Roi of the Palais Bourbon, the Library of the Luxembourg, the Church of Saint-Sulpice in Paris, the Musée Condé at Chantilly, the provincial museums of France, and this collection. Among the finest productions of the artist outside the Louvre may be mentioned the "Médée" at Lille, the "Deux Foscari" at Chantilly, the "Marc Aurèle mourant" at Lyons, the "Triomphe de Trajan" at Rouen, and the "Boissy d'Anglas à la Convention" at Bordeaux. Exceedingly few paintings by this master are to be found in England. Delacroix also lithographed subjects from Shakespeare's "Hamlet" and Goethe's "Faust."

This same composition was lithographed by Delacroix for the series from Goethe's "Faust," above mentioned. It is there rendered with a higher dramatic intensity.

DELAROCHE (HIPPOLYTE, called PAUL).

French School. Born at Paris on the 17th July, 1797. Died in that city on the 4th November, 1856. Pupil of Gros. He formed a style midway between the tempered classicism and suave Italianism of Ingres and the fiery romanticism of Delacroix, his success in the domain of Romantic art being at first much less contested than that of the latter. Delaroche exercised a great influence over modern art, and inaugurated the style of artificial stage-dramatic representation in painting which obtained for many years all over Europe. His chief work is the elaborate "Hémicycle" at the École des Beaux Arts of Paris. The most important examples of his art in England are the "Charles I. insulted by the Parliamentary Soldiers," at Bridgewater House, and the "Strafford going to the Scaffold," at Stafford House.

DERBY (WILLIAM).

British School. Born at Birmingham in 1786 ; died in 1847. He first studied under J. Barber, who was chiefly a portrait and miniature painter, and came to London in 1806. Derby copied with great skill paintings in the Stafford Gallery, and made drawings for "Lodge's Portraits of Illustrious Personages." He also executed, as a commission from the Earl of Derby, portraits of the house of Stanley from the reign of Henry VIII.

DESPORTES (ALEXANDRE-FRANÇOIS).

French School. Born at Champignenl, in Champagne, on the 24th February, 1661. Died at Paris, on the 15th April, 1743. Pupil of an obscure Fleming, Nicasius. He first established himself at Warsaw, and painted Johann Sobieski, King of Poland, and his Court ; then returned to France and obtained the highest success at the Court of Louis XIV. He was received at the Académie Royale de Peinture on the 1st August, 1699. Desportes excelled chiefly in the rendering of domestic and wild animals, of landscape, fruit and flowers. He practised also as a portrait painter, an important example of his capacity in this branch being his own portrait in shooting costume, painted for the Académie Royal as his morceau de réception, and now in the Louvre.

DIAZ (NARCISSE-VIRGILE DIAZ DE LA PEÑA).

French School. Born at Bordeaux in 1808; died in 1876. He was to a great extent self-taught, the influences which chiefly dominated him being that of Delacroix in figure painting, and that of Théodore Rousseau in landscape. Diaz became a prominent member of the so-called Barbizon School of landscape, and lived in close companionship and sympathy with Jean-François Millet and Rousseau. Though he repeated himself somewhat too much in his Fontainebleau forest scenes, he is at his best one of the most powerful and pathetic landscape painters of the middle of the century.

German School. Born at Weimar on the 30th October, 1712. Died at Dresden on the 23rd April, 1774. Pupil of the landscape painter Alexander Thiele. Dietrich played a great part at Dresden. He became Court Painter, then Inspector of the Gallery, later Director of the Manufactory of Porcelain, and finally Professor at the Academy. He was chiefly remarkable for his imitations of Rembrandt and other old masters. From his hand is "The Itinerant Musicians," No. 205 in the National Gallery.

Florentine School of 17th century. Born at Florence on the 25th May, 1616; died there on the 17th January, 1686. Pupil of Jacopo Vignali. Dolci painted in a smooth and self-conscious style, which, applied as it was to artificial conceptions, peculiarly of his own time in their calculated sweetness and superficial assumption of spirituality, won for him at the time great renown. His reputation has, during the course of this century, steadily declined.

DOMENICHINO (DOMENICO ZAMPIERI, called DOMENICHINO).

Bolognese School. Born at Bologna on the 21st October, 1581. Died at Naples on the 15th April, 1641. Pupil first of Dionysius Calvert and afterwards of the Carracci. Domenichino counts as one of the chief painters of the Carracci group, among his most important works being "The Communion of St. Jerome," in the Pinacotheca of the Vatican; "Diana and her Nymphs," in the Borghese Gallery; and the decoration of the Cappella del Tesoro, in the Cathedral of Naples. During the execution of this last task he was persistently persecuted and threatened by the notorious triumvirate known as the "Cabal of Naples." He died there, not without suspicion of poison.

DOU (GERARD).

Dutch School. Born at Leyden on the 7th April, 1613; buried there on the 9th February, 1675. Pupil of his father, the glass-painter, then of Bartholomeus Dolendo, and others; afterwards the pupil and companion of the youthful Rembrandt (1628–1631). Dou is celebrated for the extraordinary finish of his execution, combined nevertheless, in his finer work, with a certain vigour of accent which his pupils did not possess in the same degree. The school of which he was the acknowledged head included such painters as Frans van Mieris, Slingelandt, Schalcken, De Pape, and Van Staveren. Recently (1901) Dr. W. Martin, of the Hague, has published a detailed biography of this master with a catalogue raisonné of his works.

DOWNMAN (JOHN), A.R.A.

British School. Born in Devonshire in the middle of the 18th century, the exact date being unknown. Died at Wrexham, in Denbighshire, on the 24th December, 1824. He studied under Benjamin West, and in the Schools of the Royal Academy, of which he became an Associate in 1795. He practised successively at Cambridge, London, Plymouth, Exeter, Chester, and at Wrexham, where he died. Downman, although, like many of his contemporaries, he attempted subjects coming within the category of what was called "high art," is now chiefly known by his skilful and charming portraits in crayons, slightly heightened with colour, of the class to which the four examples in this collection belong. In these he shows something of the charm and distinction which mark the portraits of Sir Joshua Reynolds, by whose art he was no doubt greatly influenced.

DROST (CORNELIS).

Dutch School. Years of birth and death unknown. Pupil of Rembrandt towards the year 1638. Later on he is said to have visited Italy and to have had close relations in Rome with Jan van der Meer of Utrecht and Karel Loth. There exists considerable confusion as to the works set down in the name of this painter. In the Ryks-Museum at Amsterdam a large canvas "Herodias receiving the Head of St. John the Baptist" is catalogued in the name of Drost; but this picture is by some critics ascribed to the scarce Karel Fabritius. In the Picture Gallery at Cassel is a "Noli Me Tangere" signed "Drost. f." In the Dresden Gallery a "Mercury putting Argus to Sleep" is catalogued as by Jacob van Dorsten, who may prove to be identical with Drost.

A "Bathsheba," signed by Cornelis Drost, is now in the Museum of the Louvre.

The attribution is in this instance confirmed by marked analogies of style with the signed work in the Louvre.

DUPRÉ (JULES).

French School. Born at Nantes in 1812. Died at L'Isle-Adam in October 1889. Inspired by the works of Ruysdael and Hobbema, and also by Constable. He became one of the most remarkable landscape painters of the so-called Romantic School, which applied itself to the truthful and poetic interpretation of Nature in her more familiar aspects.

DYCK (Sir ANTHONY VAN).

Flemish School. Born at Antwerp on the 22nd March, 1599. Died in London on the 9th December, 1641, and was buried in Old St. Paul's Cathedral. Pupil first of Hendrik van Balen, then for four years the assistant of Rubens. Van Dyck in 1620-1621 resided for some months in England, and received a salary of £100, as painter to King James I. On the advice of Rubens he went to Italy in 1621, or as some hold a couple of years later, and worked much at Genoa, Rome, and Venice, returning to Antwerp some time previous to 1628. He then established himself again there, painting a whole series of vast sacred works for the churches of Flanders, and also a long succession of portraits. In 1632 Van Dyck, at the express desire of Charles I., established himself definitively in England, and he was immediately appointed Principal Painter in Ordinary to their Majesties. He remained domiciled in England down to the date of his death, in 1641, but returned temporarily to Antwerp in 1634. In 1639 or 1640, urged thereto by the King, he married Mary Ruthven, granddaughter of William Ruthven, Earl of Gowrie. Van Dyck's career as a painter may be roughly divided into four periods:—The first years of youthful striving and success at Antwerp; the years of work and wandering in Italy, which have as their outcome the Genoese or, more properly, the Italian style; the second Flemish manner; and the English manner. Included in this last period is another subsection, comprising the group of magnificent works produced during the master's visit to Antwerp in 1634. These are in the English style, yet they stand by themselves in virtue of a marked superiority, both in conception and execution, over the English portraits of the same late time.

The European collections most richly endowed with the works of Van Dyck are the Alte Pinakothek at Munich, the Louvre, the Hermitage at St. Petersburg, the Imperial Gallery at Vienna, the Cassel Gallery, the Berlin Gallery, the Antwerp Gallery, and the Wallace Collection. He is also represented by striking works in the National Gallery and the National Gallery of Scotland, in the Dresden Gallery, and the Brussels Gallery. His great sacred works are still to be found in Flanders, in the churches of Antwerp, Ghent, Malines, Courtrai, Termonde and Saventhem. The Royal collections at Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace give as a whole an unsurpassed representation of Van Dyck's art, and especially of his English period. He is also superbly represented in the collection of Earl Cowper at Panshanger, in that of the Earl of Pembroke at Wilton House, in that of Lord Leconfield at Petworth House, in that of the Earl of Radnor at Longford Castle, in that of Captain Holford at Dorchester House; and finely in the collections of the Duke of Sutherland, the Duke of Abercorn, the Duke of Newcastle, the Earl of Warwick, the Earl of Craven, the Earl of Clarendon, the Earl of Hopetoun, Lord Iveagh, Earl Spencer, the Duke of Portland, the Duke of Norfolk, Earl Darnley, Earl Fitzwilliam, Mr. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. Whitney, and some others. The Liechtenstein collection at Vienna, the Arenberg collection at Brussels, and the Serge Stroganoff collection at St. Petersburg have magnificent portraits belonging some to the earlier, some to the later Flemish period.

This picture has been sometimes called "The Wife of Cornelis de Vos." The personage represented would appear to be Isabella Waerbeke, the wife of Paul de Vos, brother of Cornelis. It is in the second Flemish manner. The pendant portrait of Paul de Vos, perished in 1890, in the fire at the Palace of Laeken, near Brussels.

This is one of the relatively few pictures signed by the artist. It bears the inscription "Aetatis suae 34. A. Van Dyck A° 1630."

In the second Flemish manner, and, with its pendant, No. 79, one of the masterpieces of that phase of Van Dyck's practice. An etched portrait in half length of Philippe le Roy, closely resembling this picture, was done by Van Dyck himself, and counts among the fine productions of this very limited class. It was not, however, elaborated into an engraving, or included in the "Iconographie" (or "Centum Icones") published in 1645 from originals by the master.

EVERDINGEN (ALLART VAN).

Dutch School. Born in 1621, at Alkmaar. Died at Amsterdam on the 8th November, 1675. The young brother of Cæsar van Everdingen. Allart was the pupil of Roelant Savery at Utrecht, and of P. Molyn at Haarlem. He travelled between 1640 and 1644 in Norway, lived between 1645 and 1652 at Haarlem, and later on was domiciled at Amsterdam. Everdingen's admirable Norwegian scenes inspired Jacob van Ruysdael, who is believed never to have seen that country.

COPLEY FIELDING).

British School. Born at East Sowerby in 1788; died at Worthing in 1855. Developed under the influence of John Varley. Copley Fielding became an Associate of the Water-Colour Society in 1810, a full member in 1812, and was elected President of that body in 1847. His art was facile and brilliant, though he was overmuch given to perfunctoriness and self-repetition. He excelled greatly in the legitimate and characteristically English method of pure water-colour. Copley Fielding cannot, all the same, be placed in the front rank among his great contemporaries, although he displayed genuine mastery in the treatment of two quite opposite subjects—inky storms at sea with strong contrasts of livid light, and the Sussex Downs half-veiled in sunlit mist. He filled with great capacity and much profit to the "Old" Society his office of President, and, moreover, exhibited in all on its walls no fewer than 1748 subjects.

FLEMISH SCHOOL (16th Century).No. 534. Portrait of a Nobleman.

Gallery III.

2 ft. 11½ in. h. by 2 ft. 3½ in. w.

Formerly catalogued as "Ambrose Dudley, Earl of Warwick," and ascribed to Frans Pourbus. The style approaches, however, more nearly to that of Frans Floris and Lucas de Heere. The old designation of the personage is probably the right one.

No. 535. Portrait of the Earl of Leicester (so-called).

The style shows affinity to that of Pieter Pourbus. On the evidence of an inscription partly of later date, this portrait has been erroneously described as that of Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, and attributed to Antonio Moro. The personage represented has not as yet been satisfactorily identified.

FLINCK (GOVERT).

one of the ablest painters of the Rembrandt school, and his pictures were not infrequently, in former days, mistaken for those of his master. He worked for Frederick William, Elector of Brandenburg, and Prince John Maurice, of Nassau, but had his chief domicile at Amsterdam. Flinck is very liberally represented in the Ryks-Museum of Amsterdam, and may be studied also in the Louvre, in the Galleries of Dresden, Munich, and Berlin, and the Hermitage of St. Petersburg.

This work, dating from the end of the 15th century, has been ascribed, on insufficient grounds, to Piero di Cosimo. It shows exactly the same composition as the reverse of a bronze medal ascribed to Bertoldo di Giovanni, the pupil and assistant of Donatello in the old age of the latter, except that in the medal appear two men at the horses' heads.

FRAGONARD (JEAN-HONORÉ).

French School. Born at Grasse in 1732. Died at Paris on the 22nd August, 1806. Pupil first, for a few months, of Chardin, then of Boucher. Fragonard, having carried off the Prix de Rome in 1752, proceeded to Italy, and there studied especially the masters of the 17th and 18th centuries, and above all Giambattista Tiepolo. He travelled through Southern Italy and Sicily with the Abbé de St. Non and the painter Hubert Robert, drawing all the sites and monuments as he went. St. Non afterwards etched a great many of these subjects, and published them in an important work—"Voyages de Naples et de Sicile." Fragonard on his return made a great success with his vast canvas, "Le grand prêtre Coréus

"se sacrifie pour sauver Callirhoé," exhibited at the Salon of 1765, and now in the Louvre; notwithstanding which he returned no more to this style of composition. He identified himself with a brilliant and audacious phase of amorous and sentimental genre illustrative of the 18th century and its manners, and by the masterly frankness of his execution, as well as by the spontaneity and passion of his mode of conception, easily obtained pardon for any overboldness of which he might be guilty. Edmund and Jules de Goncourt have not without reason styled Watteau and Fragonard the only two post-painters of the 18th century in France. Like Greuze, the sculptor Houdon, and many other artists of this late period in the eighteenth century, this master had to endure comparative oblivion and the straitest penury during the last years of his career. Fragonard's chief works are in the Wallace Collection, in the Lacaze section of the Louvre, in the Hermitage of St. Petersburg, at the Banque de France, which shows the large "Foire de St. Cloud," in the collections of M. Léopold Goldschmidt, M. Camille Groult, M. Rodolphe Kann, and M. Jacques Doucet at Paris, and in that of Mr. Pierpont Morgan, who now owns the famous decorative canvases which until lately adorned the Salon Malvilain at Grasse.

Gallery XVIII.

1 ft. 2 in. h. by 1 ft. 5½ in. w.

This picture has hitherto in the Wallace Collection been called "The Gardens at Fontainebleau." There exists, however, an etching by the Abbé de Saint-Non, after a drawing by Fragonard, styled "Le Petit Parc," which is one of those done by the latter in the course of the joint tour of the Abbé and the painter through Italy. The scene represented is probably a portion of the garden of the beautiful Villa d'Este at Tivoli, near Rome, where Fragonard, Hubert Robert, and Saint-Non lived for a summer season.

" XIX.

Painted for the Baron de St. Julien in 1768 or 1769 (see Baron Roger de Portalis: "Honoré Fragonard.") Engraved by Nicolas de Launay. From the collections of Baron de St. Julien (1788) and the Duc de Morny (1865). A repetition is in the collection of Baron Edmond de Rothschild; a smaller version was in that of the Duc de Polignac, (see Virgile Josz: "Fragonard"). Another "Escarpolette," by Fragonard, of larger dimensions, and wholly different both in conception and design, is in the collection of M. Rodolphe Kann, at Paris. This last, in its romantic and ornate character, suggests some scene in a ballet of the period.

Flemish School. Born at Antwerp in March, 1611; died there on the 11th September, 1661. Pupil of Frans Snyders. Fyt travelled in France and Italy, and on his return joined the Guild of "Roman-touch and the harmonious depth of his colour, if he did not equal the incisiveness of his drawing or the force of his design.

GAINSBOROUGH (THOMAS), R.A.

British School. Born at Sudbury, in Suffolk, in 1727. Died in London on the 2nd August, 1788. The pupil of Francis Hayman, and influenced, it is believed, by the French engraver Gravelot. Gainsborough first set up as a portrait and landscape painter in Hatton Garden, but without success. Returning to his native place, he married Margaret Burr, a young lady of some fortune, and settled at Ipswich. He removed to Bath in 1760, and in that fashionable centre found a wider field for his unsurpassed powers in portraiture and landscape. In 1774 he migrated to London, and rented a portion of Schomberg House, Pall Mall, maintaining from that time to the date of his death a rivalry in portraiture with Sir Joshua Reynolds, which has endured undiminished down to our own time, and will probably last as long as the English School of the 18th century has passionate admirers. Gainsborough was one of the original members of the Royal Academy, and exhibited regularly from the first exhibition in 1769 to 1783, after which date, in consequence of a misunderstanding connected with the hanging of pictures, he ceased to contribute. Though Gainsborough worshipped Van Dyck above all painters, he is rather to be classed among the swiftest, surest, and most brilliant executants that the world has seen—that is to say, with, if after, Velazquez and Frans Hals. In landscape, if he did not rival the classic dignity or the loftiness of sentiment of Wilson, he had an inimitable charm of his own. He gave rather the light, the colour, the enchantment of Nature, than the detail or the structure of the scenes which he paraphrased. His finest works are to be found in the National Gallery, the National Gallery of Scotland, the Wallace Collection, the Royal Galleries at Hampton Court and Buckingham Palace; in the collections of the Duke of Westminster, Lord Rothschild, Miss Alice de Rothschild at Waddesdon Manor, Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, and Lord Burton.

Belgian School. Born at Tournai, in Belgium, in 1810. Died at Brussels in 1887. Gallait studied at Antwerp and Paris, and adopted in historical painting the style made popular by Paul Delaroche, whom he at least equalled on his own ground. Among his chief works are "The Abdication of Charles V.," in the Modern Gallery, at Brussels, "The Last Moments of Count Egmont," in the National Gallery of Berlin, and "After the Execution of Egmont and Horn," in the Museum of Tournai.

GERICAULT (JEAN-LOUIS-ANDRÉ-THÉODORE).

French School. Born at Rouen on the 26th September, 1791. Died on the 18th January, 1824. The pupil first of Carle Vernet and afterwards of Guérin. Géricault early revolted against the tyranny of David and his school. He was a precursor of Romanticism in French art, and influenced Delacroix. In 1819 he sent to the Salon his great work, "Le Radeau de la Méduse," which there met with an indifferent reception. He afterwards exhibited it with much success and profit in London. It is now in the Louvre. Géricault's chief works are to be found in the Louvre and the provincial museums of France.

Dated 1560.

Dr. A. Bredius has suggested that this portrait, the technique of which differs materially from that of Holbein the Younger, and his school, may be by the Austrian artist Jacob Seisenegger (Born 1505. Died 1567), who was court painter to the Emperor Ferdinand.

No. 758. The Empress Maria-Theresia of Austria with her Family—
Water-colour. Gallery I.

The Empress-Queen is represented with her Imperial Consort, Francis Stephen of Lorraine (Emperor in 1745) and thirteen out of the sixteen children who were the issue of this marriage. On the back of the Empress's armchair are inscribed the words "Moriatur pro Rege Nostro." This is the famous acclamation with which the Magnates of the Hungarian Diet, assembled at Pressburg, greeted their young Queen when she appeared before them on the 11th of September, 1741, with her infant son Joseph in her arms, seeking their aid in support of her inheritance, then attacked on all sides. The date inscribed on the armchair of the Emperor is 1760. A large oil painting of the same subject, and of similar but by no means identical design, is in the picture gallery on the second floor of the Palace of Versailles. It lacks the inscriptions on the chairs, and bears as yet no definite attribution.

GÉRÔME (JEAN-LÉON).

French School. Born at Vesoul on the 11th May, 1824. Pupil of Paul Delaroche. Gérôme's reputation as a painter has been obtained chiefly by his studies of oriental life and character, and by the long series of works in which he expresses with the most vigorous finish subjects of the strongest dramatic import. Among the most celebrated of these last may be mentioned "Les Suites d'un Bal Masqué," "La Mort du Maréchal Ney," "La Mort de César," "Ave Cæsar, morituri te salutant," and "L'Éminence Grise." Gérôme has also achieved considerable distinction as a sculptor.

GREUZE (JEAN-BAPTISTE).

French School. Born at Tournus, near Mâcon, on the 21st August, 1725; died on the 21st March, 1805. Pupil of an obscure Lyons painter, Grandon. Greuze came to Paris and achieved a great success with his first picture, "La Lecture de la Bible"; further establishing his reputation with such popular works as "La Malédiction Paternelle," "Le Fils puni," and "L'Accordée de Village." His celebrity was attained in a great measure with these sentimental scenes from the life of the lower bourgeoisie, and Diderot, in his "Salon" of 1755 wrote of him as "le premier parmi nous qui se soit avisé de donner des mœurs à l'art." Greuze was "received" by the Académie Royale on the 23rd August, 1769; but the picture, "The Emperor Severus reproaching Caracalla," presented by him was judged so defective that he was only accepted as "peintre de genre." Bitterly humiliated and disappointed, he exhibited no more at the Salon until the year 1800. His reputation with the connoisseurs of to-day is chiefly sustained by the single heads and the figures of girls of tender years and beauty still immature, in which he has cunningly mingled seeming simplicity with a voluptuous grace. Some of his portraits of men, as well as of women, have great merit. The reputation of Greuze declined greatly in his old age, and he died in indigence. Like many great artists of his time, especially Fragonard and Houdon, he was unable to accommodate himself to the change of taste which set in with the Revolution. The Wallace Collection possesses the largest collection of Greuze's paintings, chiefly fanciful and sentimental single-figure studies, with one or two portraits. The varied group of his works in the Louvre ranks next. It includes the "Severus reproaching Caracalla," "L'Accordée de Village," "La Malédiction Paternelle," "Le Fils Puni," and the two famous pieces "La Cruce Cassée" and "La Laitière." Almost all the provincial museums of France have examples of Greuze, the museum of Angers being particularly fortunate in possessing the much admired "Madame de Porcin." The National Gallery of Scotland has five examples, including the charming "Girl with a Dead Canary." The private collections of England are still even richer in the works of this master than those of France. The most remarkable examples are to be found in those of Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, the Earl of Dudley, Mr. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. H. L. Bischoffsheim, the Duke of Wellington, and some others.

GROS (ANTOINE-JEAN), Baron.

French School. Born at Paris on the 16th March, 1771. Died at Meudon on the 26th June, 1835. Pupil of David. Gros travelled in Italy, and having been presented to Bonaparte was attached to his head-quarters in the capacity of military painter. In his celebrated "Pestiférés de Jaffa" and "Bataille d'Eylau" he broke away from the classicism of David and, in his ardent passion as in his approach to realism, showed himself a precursor of Romanticism. Returning later to the traditions of his youth he became, all the same, a pronounced opponent of the Romantic School, and painted in an old-fashioned style which subjected him to violent criticism. Stung to the heart by the attacks on his "Hercule et Diomède," exhibited in 1835, he committed suicide by throwing himself into the Seine at Meudon.

GUARDI (FRANCESCO).

Venetian School, 18th century. Born at Venice in 1712; died there in 1793. Pupil of Antonio Canale, called Canaletto. Guardi had not the accurate knowledge of perspective or the mastery of intricate composition which distinguished his leader. He surpassed him, on the other hand, in pictorial charm and lightness of touch, as in the quality and intensity of his illumination. No painter has more finely rendered the beauty and variety of the atmospheric effects in Venice and the Lagunes, or with so great a fascination given the sparkle and vivacity of the city and its inhabitants in the most brilliant period of the 18th century.

Bolognese School. Born at Calvenzano, near Bologna, on the 4th November, 1575. Died at Bologna on the 18th August, 1642. Pupil of the Carracci, and afterwards the recognised head of the Bolognese School. Guido's first works were in the naturalistic style of Caravaggio. He afterwards developed and practised with commanding ability the more idealistic and conventional manner with which he is chiefly identified.

HALS (FRANS).

Dutch School. Born at Antwerp (of parents belonging to Haarlem families) in 1580 or 1581. Died at Haarlem and was buried there on the 1st September, 1666. Frans Hals, on settling at Haarlem in 1604, became the pupil of Karel van Mander. His most famous works are the series of portrait-groups in the Haarlem Museum, showing the officers of the Civic Guard in the act of celebrating the anniversary days of their respective companies. The Berlin Gallery also possesses a superb series both of his portraits proper and of his freer and more humorous portrait-studies. Frans Hals depicts with a vital force and energy hardly paralleled in art the brighter and more momentary aspects of life and character, but avoids the whole domain in which Rembrandt, the master of the profounder and more pathetic realism, is supreme. He is one of the greatest masters of the brush of all time, and in this respect stands second to Velazquez alone. Among the public collections of Europe, other than those of Haarlem and Berlin, which show notable works by Frans Hals, are the Ryks-Museum of Amsterdam, the Louvre, the Cassel Gallery, the Antwerp and Brussels Galleries, and the Hermitage of St. Petersburg. The Liechtenstein Gallery at Vienna contains the famous full-length "Portrait of Willem van Heidhuysen." Among the best examples of the master in England are the "Laughing Cavalier" here, "L'Homme au Gant" (1630) at Buckingham Palace, the "Portrait of a Woman" in the collection of Mr. Pierpont Morgan, and a small pair of portraits, representing a burgomaster and his spouse, at Longford Castle.

French School. Born at Hamburg in 1826. Died in 1887. Having at the outset developed his art during a residence of several years in Rome, Heilbuth became in his definitive style a characteristically Parisian painter. In Rome he had been known as "the Painter of Cardinals." In Paris he rendered with great delicacy and a rare truth of atmospheric effect the landscapes of the Banlieue, or outskirts of the city, and the environs—combining with these landscape settings modern genre scenes and studies of the Parisienne of his day. A Prussian by birth, he declined, when war was declared between France and Prussia, to take up arms against his adopted country. He accordingly fled to London, and on his return at the termination of the conflict became by naturalization a French citizen.

He was one of the most skilful and painstaking of the Dutch portrait-painters, and in his way a consummate master, although he cannot be placed in the very first rank, beside Rembrandt and Frans Hals. ### HOBBEEMA (MEINDERT).

Dutch School. Born at Amsterdam in 1638. Died there on the 7th December, 1709. Pupil of Jacob van Ruysdael. Hobbema was domiciled at Amsterdam, where, from the year 1668 to that of his death, he was employed in the Excise. Adriaen van de Velde and Lingelbach usually painted the figures in his landscapes. Though Hobbema lacks the breadth and variety of his master, and has a less dramatic conception of Nature, the charm and accomplishment of his art have won for him a name hardly inferior to that of Ruysdael. Indeed, with private collectors he would appear to be the more esteemed painter. His finest works are in England, where his reputation has always stood high. The National Gallery and the Wallace Collection are especially rich in landscapes from his brush. Splendid examples are also to be found in the Dulwich Gallery, in the collection of Captain Holford at Dorchester House, and in that of Mr. Alfred Beit.

HONDECOETER (MELCHIOR DE).

Dutch School. Born at Utrecht in 1636. Died at Amsterdam on the 3rd April, 1695. Pupil of his father Gysbert de Hondecoeter and his uncle Jan Baptist Weenix. He lived between 1659 and 1663 at The Hague and afterwards at Amsterdam. Hondecoeter depicted the life and character of birds—especially those of the farmyard—with extraordinary energy and the most vigorous dramatic characterisation, as well as with great decorative effect, the only drawback to the enjoyment of his art being a pervading hotness and rustiness of colour.

HOOCH (PIETER DE) or HOOCH.

Dutch School. Born at Utrecht in 1630. Died after 1677, presumably at Amsterdam. He was at first influenced by Jacob Duck, afterwards by Rembrandt, but worked out a style absolutely his own. He was in 1653 at The Hague, then for a couple of years at Delft, and later on at Amsterdam. In the treatment of subtle gradations and brilliant contrasts of indoor light, as in the rendering of the intimate charm and repose of indoor life, De Hooch has only one rival in art—his own fellow-countryman, the great Vermeer of Delft.

HOPPNER (JOHN), R.A.

British School. Born in London in 1759. Died in 1810. A.R.A. in 1793 and R.A. in 1795. He soon became, through the patronage of the Prince of Wales, a very fashionable portrait painter. Hoppner, in his earlier style, took Reynolds as his model and exercised a fascination of a lower order than his, yet undeniable of its kind. In his later time he was the friendly rival of Lawrence.

ISABEY (EUGÈNE-GABRIEL).

French School. Born at Paris in 1804; died there in 1886. The son of the celebrated miniature-painter Jean-Baptiste Isabey. He first painted genre, and then more or less abandoned this style, in which he had shown great facility and elegance, for marine painting, which he practised with unquestioned success for more than half a century.

JOHANNOT (TONY).

French School. Born at Mannheim on the 9th November, 1803. Died at Paris on the 3rd August, 1852. Chiefly famous as a vignettist, aquafortist, and engraver of works of the Romantic epoch. Tony Johannot was the youngest of three brothers, the elder being Charles and Alfred. He worked at first in collaboration with Alfred, with whom he illustrated Walter Scott and Fenimore Cooper. He also illustrated alone Molière's plays, as well as "Gil Blas" and "Don Quixote."

JORDAENS (JACOB).

Flemish School. Born at Antwerp on the 19th May, 1593; died there on the 18th October, 1678. Pupil of his father-in-law, Adam Van Noort, but mainly developed under the influence of Rubens. Jordaens has been wrongly counted among the actual pupils of the great head of his school. Although he constantly recalls the latter, both in his types and his general mode of conception—more especially in the intensity with which he expresses joy in the physical side of life—his style shows the strongest and most exuberant individuality, and is easily distinguishable from that of any of his contemporaries. The art of Jordaens is insufficiently represented in England, whether in public or private collections. He must be studied in the National Collections of Belgium, in the Summer Palace called "The House in the Wood" at the Hague, in the Louvre, the Dresden Gallery, and the other state collections of Germany.

LAMI (LOUIS-EUGÈNE).

French School. Born in 1800. Died in 1894. Pupil of Gros and Horace Vernet. His reputation was chiefly acquired as a water-colour painter, his style being marked rather by delicacy and vivacity than by strength or concentration. The Victoria and Albert Museum contains an extensive series of drawings in this medium from his brush, these being comprised partly in the Bequest of the Rev. Chauncy Hare Townshend (1868), partly in that of Mr. Bryan (1880).

LANCRET (NICOLAS).

French School. Born at Paris on the 22nd January, 1690; died there on the 14th September, 1743. His first master was Dulin. Then, attracted by the style developed by Watteau, he entered the atelier of Gillot, whose pupil the former had been, and worked there for several years. A close friendship had sprung up between Watteau and Lancret, but the latter followed the manner of his senior so closely and deliberately that some of his productions were actually attributed to Watteau, who took offence and withdrew from the intimacy. Two paintings in this collection, Nos. 422 and 448 are instances of this close imitation, which Lancret later on exchanged for a more individual manner. He was received at the Académie Royale on the 24th March, 1719, as a painter of Fêtes Galantes. Wholly lacking Watteau's power to infuse poetry and tenderness into the most frivolous subjects, and failing, moreover, to equal his rich, vibrating colour-chords, Lancret has yet an exquisiteness peculiarly his own. He is light, gay, humorous, with a touch of irony, and even in his artifice perfectly represents the character of his time. He might fittingly be called the Marivaux of painting. The most notable examples of Lancret's works are to be found in the Royal Palaces at and near Potsdam, in the Wallace Collection, the Dresden Gallery, the Condé Museum at Chantilly, the Museum of Angers, the Hermitage at St. Petersburg, the National Museum of Stockholm, the Louvre, and the National Gallery; in the collections of Lord Wantage, Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, Mr. Pierpont Morgan, and some others.

The attribution is in this case not free from doubt. In the Hermitage are two kitchen-pieces ascribed to Lancret "Une Cuisine," and "Le Valet Galant."

No. 393. Mademoiselle Camargo Dancing ("La Camargo essaye un nouveau pas").

1 ft. 4½ in. h. by 1 ft. 9½ in. w.

Engraved by Laurent Cars. Bought by Sir Richard Wallace in 1872, at the Vente Pereire for 9,500 francs.

There is an original repetition of this picture, with a marked variation in the colour-scheme, in the Hermitage Gallery at St. Petersburg. Another original repetition, with a slight variation in the grouping, is in the Museum of Nantes. In the Neues Palais at Potsdam is "La Camargo avec son Danseur," showing the ballerina, in the same costume and the same attitude, but in the act of executing a pas de deux with a male dancer. Voltaire adroitly balancing the beauty and skill of this dancer with the equal attractions of her rival, Mlle. Sallé, wrote the following graceful lines on the two divinities of the ballet:—

"Ah! Camargo, que vous êtes brillante!"
 "Mais que Sallé, grands dieux est ravissante!"
 "Que vos pas sont légers, et que les siens sont doux!"
 "Elle est inimitable, et vous toujours nouvelle;"
 "Les Nymphes sautent comme vous,"
 "Et les Grâces dansent comme elle."

This picture has hitherto been attributed to Jean-Baptiste Pater. It is in the earliest style of Lancret, and is probably the "Bal dans un Bois," which was exhibited at the Place Dauphine in or about 1718, and there excited the ire of Watteau.

No. 450. Portrait of an Actress ("La Belle Grecque").

3 ft. h. by 2 ft. 10½ in. w.

The attribution is in this instance not quite certain. It is based on the close resemblance of this work in style and technique to the "Conversation Galante," No. 422 in this collection. Much in the same style is "Les Jeunes Oiseleurs" by Lancret at the Hermitage.

He was elected A.R.A. in 1826; R.A. in 1830; and received the honour of knighthood in 1850. The honour of a public funeral in St. Paul's Cathedral was accorded to him. LARGILLIÈRE (NICOLAS DE).

French School. Born at Paris on the 10th October, 1656. Died on the 20th March, 1746. Largillière was the pupil, at Antwerp, of Antoine Goubeau; he subsequently passed over to England, and became the assistant of Sir Peter Lely. He was received at the Académie Royale on the 30th March, 1686. Largillière was one of the most brilliant portrait painters of the age of Louis XIV. Though he belonged in point of date equally to the succeeding reign, he never completely abandoned the dignified mode of conception or the weighty splendour of adjustment which mark the portraits of his earlier maturity.

LAWRENCE (SIR THOMAS), P.R.A.

British School. Born at Bristol on the 4th May, 1769. Died in London on the 7th January, 1830. Lawrence was in the beginning self-taught, and showed marvellous precocity. At the age of ten years he set up as a portraitist in crayons at Oxford. In 1787 he entered himself as a student at the Royal Academy. In 1791 he was elected an Associate of that body, and on the death of Sir Joshua Reynolds, in the succeeding year, became Painter to the King. In 1794 he was elected a Royal Academician. After 1810, when his friendly competitor Hoppner died, Lawrence knew no rival as a portrait painter, whether in official circles or in the world of fashion. His most interesting and individual performances belong, however, to the years of his youth and earlier maturity. The portraits of his late time, in which pupils often had a considerable part, are relatively superficial and perfunctory.

LE BRUN (ÉLISABETH-LOUISE VIGÉE).

French School. Born at Paris on the 16th April, 1755; died there on the 30th March, 1842. Mlle. Vigée was in the first place the pupil of Briard, but also received advice from Doyen, Greuse, and Joseph Vernet. She married at an early age the picture-dealer Le Brun. On the 31st May, 1783, she was received by the Académie Royale. Madame Le Brun, who had been one of the favourite painters of Queen Marie-Antoinette and her court, travelled throughout Italy during the period of the Great Revolution, then visited Vienna, Dresden, Berlin, and St. Petersburg, and practised her art with great success in these cities. Later on she visited England, Switzerland, and Holland, and then finally settled down in France, where she passed the rest of her life. She composed admirably, and painted with unfailing grace and distinction, if without any deep tenderness or sympathy; but her colouring is cold and occasionally even harsh; it lacks harmony as compared with that of not a few of her predecessors in the 18th century.

Madame Vigée le Brun can be best studied in the Louvre, the Museum of Versailles, and the Uffizi at Florence. The Prado Gallery at Madrid and the Darmstadt Gallery also contain examples of her painting. Very many of her portraits remain in the private collections of France, Russia, Austria, Germany, and England.

LE MOINE (FRANÇOIS) or LE MOYNE.

French School. Born at Paris in 1688; died there on the 4th June, 1737. Pupil of Louis Galloche. Received at the Académie Royale on the 30th July, 1718. Le Moine was chiefly a painter of monumental decorations, and especially of vaults and ceilings after the fashion of the Italian masters of the 17th century. His most famous work of this class is the immense "Apothéose d'Hercule" in the Salon of that name at Versailles. Le Moine's only serious competitor in art of this order was Jean-François de Troy, each of the two distinguished artists having ardent partizans among the connoisseurs of the time. As a result of the incessant labour undergone in connection with his vast undertakings, Le Moine's mind became unhinged. A few hours after he had finished the canvas "Le Temps découvre la Vérité," now in this collection, he put an end to his own life. As the precursor of Boucher, he can be better studied at Hertford House than in any other gallery. His most important work in the Louvre is the "Hercule et Omphale" of the collection Lacaze.

XIV. ("Ancien Cabinet du Roi"), and may have been seen by Le Moine.

It was evidently inspired by the "Perseus and Andromeda" of Titian in this collection.

As illustrating the history of the Netherlands may be mentioned, "The Institution of the Golden Fleece," "Mary of Burgundy Giving Alms," and "The Inquisition Proclaimed in the Netherlands." Leys sought, with great success, to revive, in a free modern adaptation, the Flemish and German styles of the 16th century.

LOO (CHARLES-ANDRÉ, called CARLE VAN LOO).

French School. Born at Nice on the 15th February, 1705. Died at Paris on the 15th July, 1765. Pupil of his brother, Jean-Baptiste van Loo, and afterwards, at Rome, of Benedetto Luti. Carle van Loo subsequently settled with his elder brother in Paris, where he assisted in restoring the paintings of Rosso and Primaticcio at Fontainebleau. He also designed costumes and decorations for the Opera of Paris. In 1727 he returned to Rome, where he executed works of monumental decoration. On the 30th July, 1735, he was received by the Académie Royale, and he then, year by year, carried off all the official honours of his profession. His last important work was the decoration of a cupola at the Invalides, only the designs for which he was able to complete. Shortly before his death Carle van Loo passed a few months in England.

Exhibited under the above title at the Salon of 1737. This picture has hitherto been catalogued in the Wallace Collection as by Jean-Baptiste van Loo.

LOO (LOUIS-MICHEL VAN).

French School. Born at Toulon in 1707. Died in Paris on the 20th March, 1771. Son of Jean-Baptiste van Loo. Received by the Académie Royale on the 25th April, 1733. Philippe V., King of Spain, appointed him court painter. Returning to Paris after the death of that monarch he became a favourite at court, and painted the portrait of Louis XV. in his robes of state. This was exhibited at the Salon of 1761. Louis-Michel succeeded his uncle Carle van Loo in some of his official posts. Two of the most acceptable works by this painter are his portrait of himself grouped with his family (1757), and that of his uncle Carle van Loo, exhibited in 1765, immediately after the death of the latter. A group of portraits by Louis-Michel van Loo presenting various personages of the Royal House of Spain, is in the Prado Museum at Madrid. Of these the most important is the vast canvas "The Family of Philip V."

No. 477. Portrait of Louis XV. in robes of state. Gallery XX.

This is a reduced version of the original painted as above. A larger original, signed by the artist, belongs to the Earl of Orford. Another repetition of full size is in one of the upper galleries at Versailles. In a ground-floor gallery of the same palace is a copy in Gobelin's tapestry of the original picture, signed "Michel Vanloo, 1760;" and, beneath that signature, "Cozette, 1771."

LUINI (BERNARDINO).

Milanese School. Born at Luino on the Lago Maggiore about 1475. Died after 1533. Developed under the influence of Ambrogio Borgognone and his school, and later on indirectly influenced by Leonardo da Vinci, with whom, however, he cannot well have come in personal contact. Luini excelled both in fresco and oil painting, but his greatest works are in the former medium. The most famous of his frescoes are to be found in the Monastero Maggiore at Milan, in the Santuario dell Beata Vergine at Saronno, and in the Church of Santa Maria degli Angeli at Lugano. There are vast altarpieces from his hand at Legnano and in the cathedral at Como. Luini's exquisite suavity and his inclination to transmute even tragic passion into beauty and grace must not be mistaken for mere weakness or mannerism. He never achieved complete success when he attempted to present dramatic action or violent movement, but he could enwrap his conceptions in an atmosphere of tenderness and spiritual beauty all his own. Among the European galleries which contain specimens of his art may be specially mentioned the Brera, the Poldi Pezzoli Gallery, the Museum of the Castello, and the Borromeo collection (private), all of them at Milan; the Louvre; the National Gallery at Budapest; the Hermitage at St. Petersburg; and the National Gallery. The two most beautiful Luinis in England are a "Nativity," in the collection of Lord Windsor, and another larger "Nativity"—the central compartment of a great altarpiece—in that of Mr. R. H. Benson. The celebrated "Vanity and Modesty," formerly (as a Leonardo da Vinci) in the Sciarra Palace at Rome, is now in the collection of Baron Edmond de Rothschild at Paris.

MAES (NICOLAS).

Dutch School. Born at Dordrecht in 1632. Buried at Amsterdam on the 24th December, 1693. Maes was the pupil of Rembrandt at Amsterdam between 1648 and 1652. In his later time, after a short sojourn in Antwerp (between 1662 and 1665), he came under the influence of the Flemish school. He practised his art at Dordrecht, and afterwards at Amsterdam. Maes showed himself in his earlier and more forcible style the ablest and most personal of Rembrandt's pupils. In the portraits of his later time he became vapid and perfunctory, adopting the conventionality of the French style without its elegance or distinction.

Marilhat, short as was his career, became one of the greatest of Orientalist painters, and in some respects, as this collection shows, more than the equal of Decamps himself.

French School. Born at Brussels in 1744. Died at Batignolles, near Paris, on the 24th March, 1829. Pupil of Gabriel Briard. De Marne essayed first historical subjects, then landscape of the classic and severe order. He had more success with the paintings into which he introduced animals, and with genre pieces. MEISSONIER (JEAN-LOUIS-ERNEST).

French School. Born at Lyons on the 21st February, 1815. Died at Paris in 1891. Pupil of Julien Pothier and of Léon Cogniet. Meissonier is the most famous "small master" of modern France. He rivals in breadth and vigour combined with extreme finish, the greatest of the seventeenth century Dutchmen, among those whom we class as "small masters," but does not equal them in beauty of colour, subtlety of illumination, or sympathetic truth of characterisation. Meissonier excelled in every phase of dramatic and costume genre, but was much less successful when, on rare occasions, he depicted scenes and personages of our own time. His military pieces, of which some few are on a comparatively large scale, but the majority are restricted to the usual small dimensions, are in historic truth, dramatic intensity, and rigorous finish, among the most remarkable performances of their class. Most of his works are in private collections in France, Belgium, England, and the United States. The Luxembourg contains a small group of Meissonier's less celebrated paintings, together with a large series of drawings and studies. "La Rixe" is in the collection of His Majesty the King. The larger version of "1814" belongs to M. Chauchard. The Musée Condé at Chantilly contains "Les Amateurs de Tableaux," "La Vedette des Dragons sous Louis XV.," and a very representative piece "Les Cuirassiers de 1805."

MERLE--METSU.

MERLE (HUGUES).

Born in 1823 at St. Marcelin. Died in 1880. Pupil of. Léon Cogniet. He achieved in his day a considerable reputation as a painter of romantic and sentimental genre. The picture "Une Mendiante" by him is, or was, in the Luxembourg Gallery at Paris. He has painted a "Hagar and Ismael," a "Charlotte Corday," a "Beatrice," an "Ophelia," &c.

METSU (GABRIEL).

Dutch School. Born at Leyden about 1630. Buried at Amsterdam on the 24th October, 1667. Son of the painter Jacob Metsu, and believed to have been the pupil of Gerard Dou, at Leyden. He developed under various influences, including especially that of Rembrandt, and at one moment of his career was, it may be surmised, strongly attracted by a slightly younger contemporary, Vermeer of Delft. Metsu practised at Leyden, and afterwards at Amsterdam. He ranks as one of the greatest of the Dutch "small masters" of the 17th century. Leaving out of the question those two supreme painters, Pieter de Hooch and Vermeer of Delft, who made gradations and contrasts of light their chief study, he has only one equal, Terborch. The latter has a subtler charm of colour and chiaroscuro, but reveals a less forcible dramatic instinct, and altogether less power of invention.

Dutch School. Born at Leyden in 1662; died there on the 27th January, 1747. Pupil of his father, Frans van Mieris the Elder. Willem van Mieris practised his art chiefly at Leyden. His style is marked by an excessive and mechanical polish. He has little of the power of observation or the vigorous characterization which distinguish his father.

Mierevelt practised his art chiefly at Delft, where he had a host of followers and imitators. His most distinguished pupil was Paulus Moreelse. He was the court painter of the House of Orange, and as such painted also at The Hague. His sober and concentrated style in portraiture, aiming chiefly at objective truth, has its own reserve and dignity. It is based on that of the elder Netherlandish School.

MORLAND (GEORGE).

British School. Born on the 26th June, 1763. Died in London on the 29th October, 1804. Pupil of his father, Henry Robert Morland, a painter and engraver of distinction, who is represented in the National Gallery. Morland married the sister of James Ward, R.A., who was afterwards united to Maria Morland, the painter's sister. His career as an artist was greatly marred by an indulgence in dissipation, which hastened his death. He expired in a spunging-house in Eyre Street, Coldbath Fields, in his forty-first year. Morland, though his art at its worst betrays much of superficiality and perfunctoriness, shows extraordinary natural gifts as a painter. His rustic scenes and genre subjects are composed with a felicity which appears instinctive. He expresses the pictorial element of rusticity with a more naive simplicity and truth than Gainsborough, and with something, too, of his easy mastery and exquisiteness of touch. His colour, within his own self-imposed limits, is ever fresh and harmonious, and his treatment of English landscape of great facility and charm.

MORTON (ANDREW).

British School. Born at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1802. Died in 1845. He came to London, and entered the schools of the Royal Academy. Later on he attracted the attention of the Royal Family, from whom he received several commissions, William IV. sitting to him for a portrait, which is now in Greenwich Hospital. Several portraits by Morton were included in the bequest made by Marianna Augusta, Lady Hamilton, to the Nation, and these were, between 1892 and 1900, exhibited at the National Gallery. They have since been removed.

MURILLO (BARTOLOMÉ ESTÉBAN).

Spanish School. Born at Seville and baptized on the 1st January, 1618; died there on the 3rd April, 1682. Pupil of Juan del Castillo. In 1641 he proceeded to Madrid, and was there kindly received by his fellow-townsmen Velazquez. Declining to follow the advice of the latter that he should make the usual art-tour in Italy, Murillo returned in 1645 to Seville, where, in 1648, he married. Having become the acknowledged head of the School he founded there in 1660 the Academy of Painting. Murillo's finest works are executed in the realistic style proper to the Spanish School of the 17th century, tempered, however, by a peculiar ingenuousness and a charm almost feminine, which, notwithstanding its excess of tenderness, has in it nothing of conscious affectation or insincerity. He had an unerring instinct for graceful and finely balanced composition, but, even in his famous sfumato or vaporous style, he cannot be ranked high among the true colourists. His finest works are at Seville, and in the Academy of San Fernando and the Gallery of the Prado at Madrid. The Louvre, the Alte Pinakothek of Munich, the National Gallery of Buda-Pest, the Hermitage of St. Petersburg, the Dresden Gallery, the Wallace Collection, and the Gallery of the Duke of Sutherland at Stafford House, also contain important groups of works from his hand. Mr. Alfred Beit owns the series of canvases "The History of the Prodigal Son," which was in the now dispersed Dudley Collection.

NATTIER (JEAN-MARC).

French School. Born at Paris on the 17th March, 1685; died there on the 7th November, 1766. Pupil of his father, Marc Nattier, and probably of his godfather, Jean Jouvenet. After the death of Louis XIV., in 1715, Nattier proceeded to The Hague, there painted Peter the Great and several personages of the Russian Court, produced a picture on the subject of the Battle of Pultava, and began the portrait of the Empress Catherine, which, however, remained unfinished. He was received at the Académie Royale on the 29th October, 1718. Having been ruined in 1720 by speculation in the shares of Law's Bank, he devoted himself exclusively to portraiture, and became one of the favourite artists of the Court and the Painter-in-Ordinary of the Royal Princesses, especially of the daughters of Louis XV., whom he represented under all sorts of mythological disguises. He occasionally excelled, too, in the portraiture of men, a noble example of his style in this branch being the "Comte Maurice de Saxe" in the Dresden Gallery, and another, the "Buffon," in the collection of M. Cahen d'Auvers. Nattier was for his time and school a skilful and brilliant colourist. His wholly superficial, yet of its kind brilliant and accomplished, art proved to be exactly suited to the Court and the personages of his time. He betrayed, however, in many of his fashionable portraits d'apparat, and especially in those of Court beauties, a curious incapacity for realising the true individuality of his sitters. Nattier is well represented in the Louvre, but the most extensive collection of his paintings is to be found in the Palace of Versailles, where one entire gallery, on the ground floor, is filled with the portraits of the Princesses of the House of France. Four portraits by Nattier are in the Prado Museum at Madrid, two of which present the Duchess de Berry, daughter of the Regent, Philippe d'Orleans.

This portrait has hitherto been catalogued as that of the Duc de Penthièvre, son of the Comte de Toulouse; but a life-size original, identical with it in composition, which is in the collection of Mr. H. L. Bischoffsheim, bears on the back, with the signature of the artist, the date 1732. In that year the Duc de Penthièvre was but seven years old, and this personage must be between twenty-five and thirty. There is a tradition that Nattier's son-in-law, Louis Tocqué, collaborated in the execution of these pictures. In a small painting of the interior of the Hôtel de Toulouse (now Banque de France), by Garneray (Collection of Comte de Lariboisière), this ~~same~~ portrait, identical in every particular, is introduced, the scale being, however, that of a large miniature.

The repetition, on a much-reduced scale, of the life-size, three-quarter length portrait, of which the original (popularised by the fine engraving of J. Tardieu) is in the museum of Dijon. Better known is the almost exactly similar full-length in the Museum of Versailles, in the right-hand corner of which, however, a royal crown and robe are added as accessories. This last is apparently an atelier work touched by the master.

NEEFFS (PETER), the Elder.

Flemish School. Born at Antwerp shortly after 1577; died there between 1657 and 1661. Pupil of the elder Steenwyck. The two Francks, Teniers, Jan Breughel, and Van Thulden painted the figures in his interiors. Neeffs was, notwithstanding the extreme formality of his style, one of the most distinguished architectural painters of the Netherlands.

NEER (EGLON HENDRIK VAN DER).

Dutch School. Born 1635 or 1636 at Amsterdam. Died at Düsseldorf on the 3rd May, 1703. Pupil of his father, the landscape painter, Aert van der Neer, and of Jacob van Loo, at Amsterdam. Egmon van der Neer practised his art first at Rotterdam and The Hague, then in Brussels, and lastly at Düsseldorf as Court Painter to the Elector Johann Wilhelm of the Palatinate. He followed in genre painting the style of which Frans van Mieris the Elder, is the most prominent representative; but his art, notwithstanding its mechanical finish and completeness, betrays the decadence of style which showed itself in Dutch art before the close of the 17th century.

NETSCHER (CASPAR).

* Dutch School. Born at Heidelberg in 1639. Died at The Hague on the 15th January, 1684. Netscher came as a child to Holland, and was at Arnheim the pupil of H. Coster, and later on, at Deventer, the pupil of Gerard Terborch. He was domiciled at The Hague, but resided between 1659 and 1662 at Bordeaux. Netscher lacked the strong personality, the mastery and variety of the greatest among the "Small Masters" of Holland, yet showed a fineness and elegance of his own in the treatment of genre.

It shows, however, great analogy of style and execution with two genre pieces by Netscher "Die Spinnerin" (No. 1352) and "Die Näherin" (No. 1353) in the Dresden Gallery, and must be from the same hand.

NEWTON (GILBERT STUART), R.A.

British School. Born at Halifax in Nova Scotia in 1794. Died at Chelsea on the 5th August, 1835. A.R.A. in 1828, R.A. in 1832. Among his better known works are "Captain Macheath," exhibited in 1826, and "Abelard in his Study," exhibited in 1833.

OSTADE (ADRIAEN VAN).

Dutch School. Baptized at Haarlem on the 10th December, 1610; buried there on the 2nd May, 1685. Pupil of Frans Hals, but strongly influenced after 1640 by Rembrandt, and perhaps also by Adriaen Brouwer. Adriaen von Ostade practised his art at Haarlem. The quality of his painting, both in the cooler tonality which marks his earlier time, and the more golden which was adopted in the period of his maturity under the influence of Rembrandt, is hardly surpassed by any painter of his age and nationality. His genre becomes, nevertheless, to a great extent conventional, from the too persistent repetition of a few types, often bordering on caricature, and the too great monotony in the choice of motives. In fineness of observation and variety he cannot compare with Adriaen Brouwer.

OSTADE (ISAACK VAN).

Dutch School. Baptized at Haarlem on the 2nd June, 1621; died there on the 16th October, 1649. Pupil of his brother Adriaen. He practised at Haarlem. Isaack was wonderfully productive during his short life of twenty-eight years. Many of his best works are in England. The National Gallery shows no less than four examples of his art; two unusually fine landscapes, with figures, by him are in the collection of Mr. Alfred de Rothschild; and an important picture of the same class, in which he collaborates with his brother Adriaen, is to be found at Dorchester House. His genre is mainly an echo of that of his brother, but his landscape is quite personal, and easily recognisable from the peculiarity of the sparkling touch. He is at his best in his winter scenes, of which this collection contains perhaps the finest.

OUDRY (JEAN-BAPTISTE).

French School. Born at Paris on the 17th March, 1686. Died at Beauvais on the 30th April, 1755. Pupil first of his father, Jacques Oudry, afterwards of De Serre, and finally of Largillière, who watched over him with paternal care. This great portrait-painter advised his favourite to relinquish portraiture for the representation of animals and still-life. Oudry was received at the Académie Royale on the 25th February, 1719. He became one of the favourite painters of Louis XV. Among his official appointments were those of Director of the Beauvais Tapestry Works and Inspector-in-chief of the Gobelins. Of the Beauvais manufacture Oudry effected a complete regeneration. He himself supplied the cartoons for some of the most celebrated series of furniture tapestries, and among them for the Fables de La Fontaine (see the furniture in Galleries I. and II. of this collection), the Amusements Champêtres, the Chasses, and the Comédies de Molière. He further designed for the Royal Manufactory of the Gobelins in 1733 and the succeeding years, the great series of tapestries Les Chasses de Louis XV., the piece in which the artist has represented himself in the act of drawing being signed "Peint par J. B. Oudry, 1738." This important work represents the highest level of Oudry's achievement in decorative composition. There is a set of these tapestries at Fontainebleau, and another much finer and more complete in the Museo Nazionale at Florence. His favourite subjects for oil paintings were incidents in connection with sport, sporting dogs, and still-life. It was the fashion to call him the "La Fontaine of Painting." In closeness of observation and thoroughness of working out, and in the rendering of landscape backgrounds, he was often inferior to the Dutch painters of the 17th century, who treated similar subjects. He as often surpassed them, however, in the breadth and freedom of his execution, as well as in the freshness of his colour. As a painter of still-life, he showed much of the power and richness of touch which afterwards distinguished Chardin. The Louvre and this collection contain remarkable examples of his art as a painter; but the most complete series of canvases from his brush is that painted expressly for the Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who built a gallery to receive them. This group of more than forty paintings by Oudry is now in the Museum at Schwerin.

PATER (JEAN-BAPTISTE-JOSEPH).

French School. Born at Valenciennes in 1696. Died at Paris on the 25th July, 1736. Pupil of his fellow-townsmen Watteau, whose impatient and irritable disposition was the cause that Pater did not remain long with him. Watteau in the last months of his life repented of his injustice, frankly owning that he had feared the possible development of his pupil's ability. He then sent for him, and as long as his strength endured continued to give him lessons. Pater subsequently declared that this was the only fruitful teaching that he had ever received. Like that of Watteau, though in another fashion, the character of Pater was strangely at variance with his work. He lived under the constant apprehension that his health might give way before he had secured a competency, and laboured day and night to amass wealth. The result was that he died, worn-out, at the age of forty. Pater was received at the Académie Royale on the 31st December, 1728, on presentation of a "Réjouissance de Soldats." Although high rank has been accorded to him as a painter of Fêtes Galantes, his art cannot be regarded as more than a faint echo of that of his master. He had no genuine artistic personality of his own, yet he maintains a place beside his more gifted contemporaries in virtue of the delicacy and sparkle of his colour, the evenness and brilliancy of his general tone, and the essentially decorative aspect of his works. By far the most remarkable series of Pater's paintings is to be found in the Royal Prussian palaces in and near Potsdam. The Wallace Collection comes next, but with a wide interval. Characteristic examples of his art are to be found in the Lacaze Collection now in the Louvre, at Buckingham Palace, in the National Gallery of Scotland, the Jones Collection at the Victoria and Albert Museum, the Arenberg Collection at Brussels, the Museum of Angers, and especially in the collections of the Marquise de Lavalette, Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, and Miss Alice de Rothschild.

German School. Born at Eppan in the Tirol in 1702. Died at St. Michael in the Tirol in 1760. Platzer received his artistic education and development in Vienna, where he continued to practise. He painted mythological and historical subjects with extreme finish in a turgid style, arraying his personages in the strange pseudo-classic costumes affected by painters of the Barocco period. He painted almost invariably on copper. Two remarkable specimens of his extravagance and his extreme elaboration are the "Battle of Actium" and "Death of Cleopatra," at Apsley House.

POLLAIUOLO (ANTONIO POLLAIUOLO, or DEL POLLAIUOLO).

Florentine School. Born at Florence about 1429. Died at Rome on the 4th February, 1498. Pupil in the first place of the goldsmith Bartoluccio, but influenced in painting by Andrea del Castagno. He was in the first place a sculptor, goldsmith, draughtsman, and engraver though he practised also as a painter, in some few instances alone, but chiefly in collaboration with his brother Piero. Antonio Pollaiuolo represents with absolute authority the austere and passionate side of Florentine Quattrocento art, and is thus to be grouped in his proper order with Donatello, Andrea del Castagno, and Andrea Verrocchio.

POT (HENDRICK GERBITSZ).

Dutch School. Born at Haarlem about 1585. Died at Amsterdam in October, 1657. Probably a fellow-student of Frans Hals in the atelier of Karel van Mander, and developed under the influence of the former master. Pot was for a short time in London about 1632, but practised chiefly in Haarlem and Amsterdam. He is sometimes known as "The Monogrammist HP" (see Bode: "Holländische Malerei," p. 157, Ed 1883). There is a small full-length portrait of Charles I. by Hendrick Pot in the Louvre, dated 1632. Dutch School. Baptized on the 20th November, 1625, at Enkhuizen. Buried at Amsterdam on the 17th January, 1654. Pupil of his father, Pieter, in Amsterdam, and of Jacob de Wet at Haarlem. Potter, during his short life, practised his art at Delft, The Hague, and Amsterdam. He is unrivalled among the masters of the 17th century in the precision, finesse, and dramatic force with which he characterises and individualises cattle and domestic animals generally. Some of the finest examples of his work are to be found at The Hague, the Hermitage at St. Petersburg, the Louvre, and in some private collections, including those of Bridgewater House and Grosvenor House.

POURBUS (PIETER).

Flemish School. Born at Gouda between 1510 and 1513. Died at Bruges on the 30th January, 1584. Pourbus established himself at Bruges, where he painted historical and allegorical subjects and portraits. He chiefly excelled as a portrait-painter in the severe and sharply characterised Netherlandish style of the 16th century. This painting is his most remarkable effort in a style combining allegory with idealised portraiture. It is signed, and bears the artist's monogram. His works are chiefly to be found at Bruges and in the Imperial Gallery at Vienna. A "Resurrection of Christ," signed, and dated 1566, is in the Louvre.

No. 531. *An Allegorical Love Feast.Gallery III.

4 ft. 4½ in. h. by 6 ft. 8½ in. w.

The personages represented are (according to the names affixed to them) Pasithea, Aglaia, and Euphrosyne (two out of the Three Graces—one of the Goddesses being by mistake twice named, under different designations); Affectio, Cordialitas, Fiducia, and Reverentia; Adonis, Daphnis, Sapiens, and one other male personage, whose name is not now decipherable. In the left corner lies Cupid, in the right is shown the Fool with his bauble. The allegory teaches that Love and Folly are for Youth, but that the greybeard, wise through experience, contents himself with mutual respect and confidence. For Youth, are both the sensuous and the higher graces of life; for Old Age, only the latter.

POURBUS (FRANS), the Elder.

Flemish School. Born at Bruges in 1545. Died at Antwerp on the 19th September, 1581. Pupil of his father, Pieter Pourbus, and of Frans Floris, whose niece he married. He excelled in the painting of portraits and practised also historical art.

Gaspard was second only to that great master and to Claude Lorrain as the poetic interpreter of Italian scenery. POUSSIN (NICOLAS).

French School. Born at Les Andelys in Normandy in June, 1594. Died at Rome on the 19th November, 1665. Pupil of Quentin Varin, L'Allemand, and others, but further developed by the study of Raphael's compositions. Poussin visited Rome in 1624, and there formed an intimacy with Du Quesnoy (Il Fiammingo). He also frequented the academy of Domenichino. His first period of maturity was marked by the production of classic and biblical subjects, treated with great severity and grandeur, in a system of harshly contrasted colours. Poussin went to Paris in 1640 with M. de Chantelou, and was there graciously received and employed by Louis XIII. and Cardinal Richelieu. His return to Italy was, however, accelerated by the intrigues of Simon Vouet, Feuchères, and the architect Mercier, of which he has perpetuated the memory in the ceiling-picture "Le Temps soustrait la Verité aux atteintes de l'Envie et de la Discorde" (Louvre). Poussin's colouring became softer and his capacity for suggesting atmosphere greater, after his return from Paris, and he then produced such masterpieces as the "Echo et Narcisse" and "Les Bergers d'Arcadie," in the Louvre. Finest of all his works in conception and design, if not in realisation, are the solemn conceptions of his last years. Noticeable among these last are the series of four canvases "The Seasons" and the beautiful unfinished composition "Apollo and Daphne"—all of them in the Louvre. A great number of Poussin's most important works are in England, most of them, however, belonging to the earlier time. The National Gallery, the Dulwich Gallery, and the collections of the Duke of Portland at Belvoir Castle, and of the Earl of Ellesmere at Bridgewater House, are especially rich in his works. An important series of paintings from his hand is to be found in the Museum of the Prado at Madrid.

PREDIS (CRISTOFORO DE).

Milanese School. A miniature painter, born at Modena, but belonging, if he be judged by style, to the elder branch of the Milanese School. He flourished in the latter half of the 15th century, and is believed to have been the father of the noted Milanese painter Ambrogio de Predia, whose name and works were some twenty years ago rescued from oblivion by the celebrated Italian critic Giovanni Morelli (Ivan Lermolieff). There is a very fine miniature by Cristoforo signed "Opus Xpori de Predia," and dated 1474, in the Royal Library at Turin. The only other miniatures certainly from his hand are in the Church of the Madonna del Monte above Varese and in the Ambrosian Library at Milan.

PRUD'HON (PIERRE-PAUL).

French School. Born at Cluny on the 4th April, 1758. Died at Paris on the 16th February, 1823. Pupil of Devosges at Dijon. Prud'hon travelled in Italy, and received from the works of Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, Andrea del Sarto, and Correggio an indelible impression. In an age dominated by the false classicality and the artificial mode of conception of Jacques-Louis David and his school, Prud'hon remained the only true painter. While adopting in a modified form their standpoint, which was that of his time, he combined with it the magic of chiaroscuro and the flexibility of life. Among his most celebrated works are "La Justice et la Vengeance divine poursuivant le Crime," "L'Assomption de la Vierge," "Le Christ en Croix," the "Portrait de Madame Jarre," and the ceiling "Diane implorant Jupiter"—all of them in the Louvre. The Museum of Dijon contains a fine series of male portraits by him, as well as a great ceiling, adapted from one by Pietro da Cortona in the Barberini Palace at Rome. Outside the Wallace Collection Prud'hon is almost unrepresented in England. Nowhere does he show himself a greater master than in his drawings, of which magnificent series are to be found in the Louvre and the Musée Condé at Chantilly.

RAFFET (DENIS-AUGUSTE-MARIE).

French School. Born at Paris in 1804. Died in 1860. Pupil of Baron Gros, and of the military draughtsman and painter Charlet. Raffet was without a rival in the rendering of the battle scenes and military subjects of the First Republic and the First Empire. The heroic ardour of these, undiminished by the realistic truth of the delineation, is hardly paralleled in modern art. Living and working in the Romantic period, and seeing his favourite subjects from a certain distance, he was able to impart to them with the utmost dramatic passion, an almost epic breadth and grandeur. He also achieved success in his studies of Russian, Caucasian, and Italian types and incidents of his own time. He is pre-eminent above all as a lithographer.

RAMSAY (ALLAN).

British School. Born at Edinburgh in 1713. Died at Dover in August, 1784. He studied first at the St. Martin's Academy, and in 1736 went to Italy, where he was first the pupil of Solimena, then of Imperiali. On his return he established himself at Edinburgh, whence about 1762 he migrated to London. He was introduced by his fellow-countryman, Lord Bute, to George, Prince of Wales (afterwards George III.), who, in 1767, a few years after his accession, appointed him Painter-in-Ordinary. He executed throughout his career numerous portraits of that monarch and of his consort, Queen Charlotte. Ramsay was a respectable painter of solid accomplishment, who at his best showed much of the completeness and also of the coldness which marked the French and Italian portraiture of the period to which he belonged. Sir Joshua Reynolds, who was on friendly terms with him, used to say:—"There's Ramsay, a very sensible man, but 'he is not a good painter.'" He is not at present represented in the National Gallery, but curiously enough has found a place in the British section of the Louvre.

REMBRANDT (HARMENSZ) van Ryn.

Dutch School. Born at Leyden on the 15th July, 1606. Buried at Amsterdam on the 8th October, 1669. Pupil of Jacob van Swanenburgh, at Leyden; then of Pieter Lastman, at Amsterdam. Rembrandt practised his art up to 1631 at Leyden, and afterwards at Amsterdam. His first manner, characterised by greenish-grey flesh-tones and high finish, coincides with the years of youthful endeavour at Leyden, but extends onwards to about 1632 or 1633. The second manner coincides more or less with the years of Rembrandt's vogue and worldly success at Amsterdam ; it may be said to culminate with the years 1640-1642, but is not completely merged in the third and greatest manner until 1648-1650. The third manner may again be divided into two sections, the first ending about 1658, and the second occupying roughly the last ten years of the master's life. Rembrandt is the greatest master of a century which contained Velazquez and Frans Hals, Rubens, and Van Dyck. If Velazquez is incomparably the greatest painter of his age, Rembrandt is the mightiest genius, the artist who has penetrated deepest into the secrets of humanity, who has, with the greatest insight and the greatest sympathy portrayed the men and women of his time and his race. He is the veritable precursor of modern art in its finest essence, and it is only now that the full scope of his genius has been universally recognised. The most remarkable collections of this master's works to be seen in public museums are at the Hermitage in St. Petersburg, in the Cassel Gallery, the Louvre, the Berlin Gallery, the Dresden Gallery, the Brunswick Gallery, the Royal Museum of Stockholm, the Ryks-Museum of Amsterdam, the Royal Gallery of The Hague, the National Gallery, the Wallace Collection, and the Imperial Gallery of Vienna. Rembrandt is also represented in the Corporation Art Gallery of Glasgow, the National Gallery of Scotland, the National Gallery of Ireland, the Dulwich Gallery, the Metropolitan Museum of New York, the National Gallery of Buda-Pest, the Darmstadt Gallery, the Städel Institut of Frankfurt-a-Main, the Brussels and Antwerp Galleries, the Uffizi and the Pitti at Florence, the Royal Gallery of Hampton Court, the collection of the King of Roumania, and some others. Among the private collections which contain the most remarkable groups of his works are to be cited those of H.M. the King at Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle ; those of the Duke of Westminster, Lord Ashburton, the Earl of Ellesmere, the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Leconfield, Lord Iveagh, the Earl of Ilchester, Earl Cowper, Captain Holford, and Mr. Alfred Beit in England ; those of M. Rodolphe Kann, M. Maurice Kann, and Baron Gustave de Rothschild in Paris ; that of Prince Liechtenstein at Vienna ; that of Dr. A. Bredius at The Hague ; and those of Prince Youssoupoff, Prince Serge Stroganoff, and Count Orloff Davidoff in St. Petersburg.

REYNOLDS (SIR JOSHUA), P.R.A.

British School. Born at Plympton, in Devonshire, on the 16th July. 1722. Died at his house in Leicester Square on the 23rd February, 1792, and was buried in St. Paul's Cathedral. Pupil of Hudson, and further developed by the study of the Italian masters in the course of a sojourn of three years (1749-1752) in Italy. Reynolds was also very strongly influenced by Rembrandt. After the Italian journey he settled in London, and soon became the leading portrait-painter in the capital. In 1768 he was elected President of the newly-established Royal Academy of Arts, and in 1784 he succeeded Allan Ramsay as Painter-in-Ordinary to George III., who, however, made but little use of his services, preferring that the Royal person and the Royal family should be portrayed by his rival, Gainsborough. Reynolds exhibited altogether 245 works at the Royal Academy, sending on an average as many as eleven annually. His Discourses on Art were delivered regularly there from January, 1769, to December, 1790. After 1789, he was compelled to practically relinquish his art in consequence of great weakness of sight. Reynolds's career, from the date of his return to London after his Italian tour to that of his retirement, so soon to be followed by his death, was one of unchecked artistic and social success. He showed infinite variety in the portrayal of the men and women of his time, and in this respect was above rivalry. His portraits of women are marked by a suavity, grace, and distinction upon which it is unnecessary to dwell; his portraits of men show a grasp of character and a dramatic instinct which had hardly a parallel in the 18th century. If Gainsborough was the greater master of the brush, the more astonishing executant, Reynolds was perhaps the greater artist. The most important groups of his works in public galleries are to be found in the National Gallery and the Wallace Collection. Among the private collections which can boast of splendid examples of his art may be cited those of Miss Alice de Rothschild at Waddesdon Manor, of Earl Spencer, the Earl of Crewe, Lord Leconfield, Lord Burton, Sir Charles Tennant, Lord Rothschild, the Earl of Radnor, the Duke of Westminster, the Duke of Marlborough, the Earl of Normanton, Lord Iveagh, Sir Charles Bunbury, Mr. W. ### RIGAUD (HYACINTHE).

French School. Born at Perpignan on the 20th July, 1659. Died at Paris on the 27th December, 1743. Pupil of Pezet and Ranc. Received at the Académie Royale on the 2nd January, 1700. Rigaud was the principal official painter of the Court of Louis XIV., and no artist of his time so frequently represented that monarch himself. Like his contemporary and friendly rival, Largillière, he belongs, in point of time, both to the age of Louis XIV. and that of Louis XV. Yet to the end of his career he preserves in his art the character of the former period.

ROBERT (LOUIS-LÉOPOLD).

French School. Born on the 13th May, 1794, at La Chaux-de-Fonds, in Switzerland. Died at Venice on the 20th March, 1835. He studied in the school of Jacques-Louis David. Robert went to Rome, and there made an especial study of the Roman brigands and the peasants allied to them. He then exhibited at Rome a dozen pictures on these motives, and these made a great sensation among the artists then inhabiting the Holy City. He continued to paint Italian brigands as well as the contadini and contadine of the regions round Rome and Naples. His two principal works, "L'Arrivée des Moissonneurs dans les Marais Pontins" and "Le Retour du Pèlerinage à la Madone de l'Arc," are in the Louvre. Léopold Robert committed suicide at Venice.

A notable painter of historical incident and historical genre. In style and conception he approaches more nearly to the coldly correct romanticism of Delaroche than to the passionate and lyrical romanticism of Delacroix. Robert-Fleury

In 1822 he went to London and was engaged as a scene-painter at Drury Lane Theatre. He soon passed on to higher efforts, and tried his fortune with great success as a painter of architectural subjects in oils and water colours. In 1832-33 he made a tour in Spain, and afterwards undertook many fruitful journeys on the Continent of Europe and in the East. ROMNEY (GEORGE).

British School. Born at Dalton, in Lancashire, on the 15th December, 1734. Died at Kendal on the 15th November, 1802, and was buried at his birthplace, Dalton. Romney, having shown natural ability for drawing, was at the age of nineteen placed by his father with a painter of the name of Steele, at Kendal. In 1762 he went to London, and there rapidly rose to fame and fortune. In 1773 he paid a long-desired visit to Italy, and in 1775 settled in London, and took a house in Cavendish Square. He acquired a popularity hardly second to that of Reynolds and Gainsborough, and, indeed, divided the town into a Reynolds and a Romney faction. He excelled not only in the portraiture of the beautiful and fashionable women of his day, but in the representation of men. Moreover, as the painter of boys, preserving in their beauty a characteristically British and manly type, he was hardly second to Reynolds himself. Romney conceived in middle life a passionate and romantic affection for the beautiful Emma Hart (or Lyon), afterwards Lady Hamilton. He portrayed her in an unending series of studies and portraits, and under many transparent disguises, which served but to enhance her loveliness. He painted also with less acceptance works in which his imagination sought to soar into the regions of poetry. In Lord Leconfield's collection at Petworth House are to be found "The Infant Shakespeare nursed by Tragedy and Comedy," "Mirth and Melancholy," and another fanciful portrait-group of the same class. Romney is now fairly represented at the National Gallery. His finest portraits are, however, scattered through the private galleries in England. Among those best endowed in this respect may be mentioned the collections of the Duke of Sutherland, Lord Iveagh, the Earl of Jersey, Lord Burton, Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, Lady de Saumarez, Miss Alice de Rothschild, Lord Hillingdon, Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. F. C. Pawle, and Mr. Tankerville Chamberlain.

ROSA (SALVATORE).

Neapolitan School. Born at Renella, near Naples, on the 21st July, 1615. Died at Rome on the 15th March, 1673. Developed under the influence of the Naturalistic School of the 17th century. Salvatore Rosa practised his art at first at Naples, but ultimately settled in Rome, where he died. He was not only one of the foremost painters of his school, but also an etcher, and, moreover, according to tradition, an accomplished musician. He painted with great force rugged, picturesque landscapes, dens and caverns of banditti, scenes of violence and terror; but rose to a higher level when he treated from the standpoint of the pastoral poet familiar subjects from biblical history. Here he showed creative power and pathos of the highest order. Some of his finest works are to be found in the Pitti Palace at Florence, in the Hermitage at St. Petersburg, in the Louvre, and at the Bridgewater Gallery in London.

French School. Born at Paris on the 12th April, 1812. Died at Barbizon on the 22nd December, 1867. Pupil of Guillon Lethière. Rousseau was one of the chief painters of the so-called Barbizon School, and fought his way to fame through a thousand obstacles and difficulties. For thirteen years, from 1835, his pictures were systematically excluded from the Salon, in company with those of Delacroix, Champmartin, Huet, Marilhat, Decamps, and other Romanticists. The climax of his reputation was attained in 1867, when, at the Exposition Universelle, he carried off one of the four Grand Medals of Honour. Rousseau was the brother in art and the companion of Jean-François Millet, whom he often befriended in his hours of need. He painted mainly the Forest of Fontainebleau, and painted it with infinite variety in the motives selected, the mode of conception, and the illumination. Originally inspired by Constable, as were not a few of the French landscapists of the Romantic School, he developed, on this basis, a wholly original style. If Corot is the most inspired poet-painter of his group, and Daubigny its most pathetic realist, Théodore Rousseau is certainly the most vigorous and dramatic, the most various artist, and the most enthusiastic student of Nature in every phase to be found in this great modern school of landscape.

He, in his turn, exercised a marked influence over another admirable landscape painter of the group, Narcisse-Virgile Diaz.

RUBENS (Sir PETER PAUL).

Flemish School. Born at Siegen in Westphalia on the 28th June, 1577. Died at Antwerp on the 30th May, 1640. Pupil, first of Tobias Verhaagt, then of Adam van Noort, finally of Otto van Veen (Otho Venius). In 1600, Rubens went to Italy and entered the service of Vincenzo I. Gonzaga, Duke of Mantua, to whom he remained attached, with certain intervals, until 1608. In 1603 he was sent by Vincenzo to Spain on a mission to Philip IV., and remained there until 1604. He was, in 1609, soon after his return to Antwerp, appointed Court Painter to Albert and Isabella, Regents of the Netherlands. In October of that year he married his first wife, Isabelle Brant. He visited Paris in 1620, and there received from Marie de Médicis the commission for the celebrated series of paintings, illustrating incidents in her life. These were completed in 1625 by the master and his pupils, and placed in the new palace of the Luxembourg; they are now in the Louvre, and have recently been set up in a gallery expressly constructed to receive them. In 1628 Rubens was sent by Isabella, Regent of the Netherlands, on a diplomatic mission to Philip IV. of Spain, and in 1629-1630, he was in England on a similar mission to Charles I., by whom he was knighted in the latter year. In 1630 he married as his second wife, the beautiful Hélène Fourment, niece of Isabelle Brant. Rubens, in the magnificent house and studio which he built for himself at Antwerp, was surrounded by pupils and assistants, whose large share in the works of his maturity accounts for the extraordinary number and dimensions of these. His influence was paramount, not only with his immediate followers, but, more or less, with the whole of the contemporary Flemish school. Perhaps no painter enjoyed during his lifetime so brilliant and exceptional an artistic and social position. The art of Rubens did not fully develop itself until his return from Italy, when he assumed, with the "Elevation of the Cross," and afterwards with the "Descent from the Cross," the commanding position among Flemish painters which was never again disputed. The final development of his style in the direction of sensuous beauty, of magic swiftness and strength of touch, of transparency and glow of colour coincides with his second marriage, and extends to the date of his death.

The most important collections of the master's works are to be found in the museum and churches of Antwerp; in the Alte Pinakothek of Munich; in the Hermitage of St. Petersburg; in the Louvre; in the Imperial and Liechtenstein Galleries and the Academy of Arts at Vienna; in the Uffizi and the Pitti Palace at Florence; in the Dresden and Berlin Galleries, the Brussels Gallery, and the National Gallery. The museums of Lille, Lyons, Marseilles, Nancy, Caen, Aix, Valenciennes, and Grenoble, in France, contain remarkable canvases from the brush of Rubens, some of which are of peculiar importance as representing the earlier and less known phases of his career. Among the private collections in which he is exceptionally well represented may be mentioned those of Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, at Paris, and of the Duke of Westminster at Grosvenor House. The Rubens Room, dedicated to the master at Windsor Castle, contains, with notable works undoubtedly his, a good deal that is not from his hand, including the celebrated "St. Martin dividing his Cloak with the Beggar," which is now universally recognised as a work of Van Dyck's first period.

Another original of smaller dimensions, and, fine as it is, hardly equal to this example in quality, is in the Alte Pinakothek, at Munich. This work—probably the later of the two—was painted about 1636. It came from the Balbi Palace at Genoa, where it had as a pendant the "Château de Steen," by Rubens, now in the National Gallery; the dimensions of the two canvases being nearly identical. Brought to England in 1802, it was afterwards purchased by the Earl of Orford for 2600 guineas. At his sale it was purchased by the Marquis of Hertford for 4550 guineas.

Purchased in 1862 by the Marquis of Hertford from the Baillie collection at Antwerp for 6300 francs. The type is that of the "Christ au coup de poing," now only known by the magnificent drawing in the Musée Boymans, at Rotterdam, made by the master for the engraving of Paul Pontius.

No. 81. *The Holy Family, with St. Elizabeth, and St. John the Baptist.

4 ft. 5½ in. h. by 3 ft. 3 in. w.

Engraved by P. J. Tassaert.

Painted for the Oratory of the Archduke Albert, Co-Regent of the Netherlands. This "Holy Family" belonged, in 1770, to Duke Charles of Lorraine, Governor of the Netherlands. It was later in the Imperial Gallery of Vienna, and is mentioned in the catalogue of 1784, but was presented by the Emperor Joseph II. to the Chevalier Burton, of Brussels, and by him sold to M. de la Hante, who transported it to England. The picture was, in 1840, in the collection of Mr. E. Higginson, of Saltmarsh Castle. At his sale, in 1846, it was purchased by the Marquis of Hertford, for £3000. (See Max Rooses: "L'Oeuvre de Rubens.")

A small copy of this canvas, painted by David Teniers the Younger, in a much cooler, greyer tonality, is in the gallery at Apsley House.

No. 93. *Christ's Charge to Peter.

4 ft. 7 in. h. by 3 ft. 8½ in. w.

Painted about 1616 for Nicholas Damant, and by him placed on an altar in the chapel of the Holy Sacrament, in the Collegiate Church of St. Gudule at Brussels. Beneath the picture was then an elaborate dedicatory inscription, which is given in full in M. Max Rooses's monumental work on Rubens already cited. After many vicissitudes this picture was purchased, in 1824, by the Prince of Orange for £2500. At the sale of the collection belonging to William II., King of Holland, it was purchased by the Marquis of Hertford for 18,006 florins.

This picture belongs to a series of sketches in oils representing The History of Constantine, being the master's original designs for the cartoons commissioned of him by Louis XIII. for a set of tapestries, of which two complete examples from different factories are still in the Garde-Meuble, at Paris. From these sketches Rubens's pupils, Justus van Egmont, Wildens, Snyder, Lucas van Uden, and Theodor van Thulden elaborated the cartoons. The sketches were originally in the Orleans Gallery. The Marquis of Hertford purchased the "Defeat and Death of Maxentius" at the Rogers sale (1856) for 260 guineas. (See Max Rooses: "L'Oeuvre de Rubens.")

A larger sketch by Rubens, of somewhat different design, is in the collection of the Earl of Darnley, at Cobham. This sketch, Nos. 523 and 524 in this collection, and other designs of the same order in the Liechtenstein collection at Vienna and the Berlin Museum, contain Rubens's preliminary ideas in oils for a series of great pictures, "The Life of Henri IV.," which were intended by Marie de Médicis to balance the series in which were symbolised incidents from her own life. Of this "Life of Henri IV." only the two vast canvases now in the Uffizi, "The Triumphal Entry of Henri IV. into Paris" and "The Battle of Ivry" were carried out, and even these remained unfinished.

RUYSDAEL (JACOB VAN).

Dutch School. Born at Haarlem in 1628 or 1629. Buried in that city on the 14th March, 1682. Probably developed under the example of Cornelis Vroom, and of his uncle, Salomon van Ruysdael, but powerfully influenced by Allart van Everdingen. He practised his art first at Haarlem, but removed in 1657 to Amsterdam, where he remained until 1681. Jacob van Ruysdael was but little appreciated in his day; he was reduced to extreme poverty, and died in an almshouse. His finest works are transcripts of the scenery of his native country, forest prospects, farms and homesteads nestling in woods, sea and sea-coast scenes. His most popular pieces, however, are the waterfalls of a Norwegian character, though these are clearly adapted from the similar paintings of Everdingen. There is no reason to believe that Ruysdael ever visited Norway. In his sad and solemn treatment of nature, from a poetic and yet a homely and realistic standpoint, he is one of the precursors of modern landscape.

SARTO (ANDREA D'AGNOLO DI FRANCESCO).

Florentine School. Called Andrea del Sarto from the occupation of his father, who was a tailor. Born at Florence on the 16th July, 1486; died there on the 22nd January, 1531. Pupil of an obscure painter, Gian Barile, then of Piero di Cosimo; developed under the influence of Fra Bartolommeo, Leonardo da Vinci, and Michelangelo. He practised his art chiefly in Florence, but was during a portion of 1518 and 1519 in France, in the service of Francis I. The king received him with honour, and entrusted to him a sum of money to purchase works of art. Andrea having been led—it is believed through the extravagance of his wife, Lucrezia del Fede—to squander this sum, never dared to return to France. In general technical accomplishment, in faultless harmony of composition, in a rare combination of the gift of the colourist with that of the draughtsman and monumental designer, Andrea del Sarto exceeded all the painters of his time. If his genius, if his imaginative power had equalled his executive skill he would have been, perhaps, the greatest of Italian masters. Unfortunately beneath the grandeur and the technical perfection of his work there is often little inspiration or true creative power. He was called, from the excellence of his frescoes at the Santissima Annunziata in Florence, "Andrea senza Errori." His greatest works are still to be found in Florence. In the Pitti and Uffizi galleries are his finest oil paintings, while his most famous frescoes are at the Santissima Annunziata, in the Cloister of the Scalzo, and at S. Salvi, outside the walls of the city. The Louvre, the Hermitage, the Prado, the Dresden Gallery, the Berlin Gallery, and the National Gallery also contain characteristic canvases. England is on the whole singularly poor in examples from his brush.

This picture is the unquestionable original of many repetitions and copies. Of these, there are two, Nos. 384 and 396, in the Prado Gallery, at Madrid. Others are to be found in the gallery at Munich, and in the collection at Longford Castle. Another copy is in the possession of Lt.-Col. H. M. L. Hutchison at Exeter.

A sheet of drawings by Andrea del Sarto, upon which are two studies for the "St. John" in this picture, is in the Print Room of the British Museum.

SASSOFERRATO (GIOVANNI BATTISTA SALVI).

Bolognese School. Called after his birthplace Sassoferrato. Born on the 11th July, 1605, at Sassoferrato. Died at Rome on the 8th April, 1685. Pupil of his father, Tarquinio Salvi, but developed under the influence of the Carracci School and their followers. In the over-sweetness of his style and the finish of his draughtmanship, though not in his types or his technique generally, Sassoferrato bears some resemblance to his contemporary Carlo Dolci.

SCHALCKEN (GODFRIED).

Dutch School. Born at Made, near Geertruidenberg, in 1643. Died on the 16th November, 1706, at The Hague. Pupil first of Samuel van Hoogstraten, then of Gerard Dou. Schalken practised chiefly at Dort, but was employed for some time in England by William III., and at Düsseldorf by the Elector Johann Wilhelm. His favourite candlelight pieces are borrowed from those of his master Gerard Dou, by whose art, indeed, that of Schalken is entirely shaped and dominated. The pupil's colour is on occasion hot and disagreeable, and his laborious finish is not often redeemed, like that of Dou, by the luminous breadth and authority of the rendering.

SCHEFFER (ART).

French School. Born at Dordrecht, in Holland, on the 10th February, 1795, his father being a German and his mother of Dutch origin. Died in 1858. Pupil first of his father in Holland, then of Guérin in Paris. Scheffer, like Géricault, rebelled against the pseudo-classical style and the teachings of this master, who represented the principles of the school of David. He became one of the most ardent Romanticists of his day, and as such achieved a reputation which the verdict of subsequent generations has not ratified. A certain element of German mysticism and sentimentality, attributable to his Teutonic origin, gave a peculiar colour to his art. He began his career with scenes of a pathetic realism, but in his maturity turned his attention chiefly to the works of the great poets worshipped by the Romanticists, and more particularly to Dante, Goethe, Schiller, and Byron. On motives derived from their works many of his once celebrated compositions are based. In his last period he devoted himself chiefly to sacred art.

Slingelandt practised at Leiden. Flemish School. Baptised at Antwerp on the 11th November, 1579; died there on the 19th August, 1657. Pupil of Pieter Brueghel, the younger, and afterwards of Hendrick van Balen. He settled permanently at Antwerp after travelling in Italy during the years 1608 and 1609. Snyder began by painting still-life, dead game and fish, fruit and vegetables, and, later on, under the influence of Rubens, produced pictures in which these subjects were relieved by the introduction of the human figure, as well as dramatic hunting-scenes with savage beasts at bay, in which he showed himself second only to his great exemplar. He frequently collaborated both with his great chef d'école and with the painters of his circle. The colouring of Snyder is hard and trenchant as compared with that of Rubens and some other contemporaries of the Flemish school, but he is unsurpassed in the incisive force of his touch, and the sustained vigour of his execution.

of Raphael in the workshop of the former. Lo Spagna was in his best manner a close imitator of his master, in many of whose works he must have had a part. Not a few of his paintings are still put down to Perugino, though they are to be distinguished without much difficulty from his by reason of certain peculiar mannerisms in the colouring, in the drawing of the human face, and in the casting of draperies.

Stanfield began life as a sailor, but soon relinquished this calling, and began his art career as a scene-painter at the Royalty Theatre in Wellclose Square, whence he passed in the same capacity to Drury Lane Theatre. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1832, and a full member in 1835. Stanfield was one of the most assiduous exhibitors at the Academy, to which he contributed a long series of marine subjects, coast and river scenes, and landscapes, most of them of a romantic character, or relieved by some dramatic incident. He so exhibited altogether no fewer than 132 pictures.

STEEN (JAN).

Dutch School. Born at Leyden about 1626; buried there on the 3rd February, 1679. Steen was in 1646 a student at the University of Leyden. He was a pupil of Nikolaus Knupfer, at Utrecht ; then, it is said, of Adriaen van Ostade, at Haarlem ; and, finally, of Jan van Goyen, at The Hague. He married the daughter of the latter in 1649. Steen came also within the circle of influence of Frans Hals. In Leyden he is said to have combined the business of a tavern keeper with the occupation of painting. Steen was in his more carefully rendered efforts one of the most brilliant and accomplished painters of the Dutch School. His most usual mood was that of a coarse, boisterous, yet genial humour, strongly inclining to low comedy and broad farce ; but he could be in turn a grim and a sly satirist, and even on occasion a simple and pathetic realist. His art is, however, like that of Adriaen van Ostade, considerably marred by the monotonous and mask-like character of the expression in many of his faces. He seldom succeeds in combining breadth of generalization with truthful adherence to individual nature.

STORCK (ABRAHAM).

Dutch School. Born about 1630 at Amsterdam ; died there in 1710. An imitator and, perhaps, pupil of Ludolf Backhuysen. The aim of Storck in the riverside pieces, set off with florid buildings in the style of the 17th century, with which his name is chiefly connected, is mainly a decorative one. Pictures from his hand are to be found in the National Gallery (No. 146), and in the galleries of Dresden, Rotterdam, and Brussels.

SULLY (THOMAS).

American School. This painter was born in England in 1782, but went to the United States as a child and was educated at Washington. In 1820 he came to London and was much encouraged by Sir Thomas Lawrence. He returned to America in 1838, and died at Philadelphia in November 1872, at the age of ninety. A very similar but rather more elaborate full-length portrait was painted by Sully as a commission from the St. George's Society of Philadelphia, and is now in the Academy of Fine Arts of that city. Some curious particulars as to the painting of these portraits of Queen Victoria are to be found in a paper entitled "Recollections of an Old Painter," written by Sully in old age, and published, in November 1869, in an American magazine, "Hours at Home." The Hertford House picture was copied by command of Her late Majesty for Kensington Palace.

TENIERS (DAVID), the Younger.

Flemish School. Baptized at Antwerp on the 15th December, 1610. Died at Brussels on the 25th April, 1690. Pupil of his father, David Teniers the Elder, and further developed under the influence of Adriaen Brouwer, and, in a wider sense, of Rubens. The career of Teniers is one unbroken record of success and easy achievement. The Archduke Leopold William, Governor of the Spanish Netherlands, appointed him his court painter and the keeper of his rich gallery of paintings, of which, with the pictures in it, Teniers painted many and diverse views, some of which are now to be found in the Imperial Gallery of Vienna and the Alte Pinakothek of Munich. He further painted a vast number of small copies from pictures in that prince's gallery, a great many of which were formerly collected at Blenheim Palace. Several examples of this class are in the Wallace Collection. Teniers bought himself a picturesque country seat at Perck, between Antwerp and Mechlin, and there received the best company of his native city. His style of execution at its highest is incomparably sparkling and brilliant; his colour fresh, bright, and stimulating; his humour merry and superficial. He is at his best when he studies nature and humanity at first-hand, and not when he contents himself, as he too often does, with a restricted number of well-worn types and incidents taken once for all from the contemporary peasant life of his native Flanders. Almost all the public and private galleries of importance in Europe possess examples of this prolific master; but the most important group of his works is to be found in the Hermitage at St. Petersburg. This numbers no less than forty-three canvases, among which is his masterpiece, "Les Arquebusiers et les Membres des Corporations d'Anvers."

TERBORCH, or TER BORCH (GERARD).

Dutch School. Born at Zwolle in Overijssel, 1617. Died at Deventer on the 8th December, 1681. Terborch received preliminary instruction from his father Gerard Terborch the Elder, a rather obscure painter, and then became the pupil of Pieter Molyn at Haarlem, in which city he also came under the influence of Frans Hals. He afterwards visited England, and then, setting out on further wanderings, travelled through Germany to Italy, and returned to Holland by way of France. He remained some time at Amsterdam, and there studied the works of Rembrandt. In 1646 he repaired to Münster, where, in 1648, he painted the famous "Ratification of the Treaty of Peace," which was presented by the late Sir Richard Wallace to the National Gallery, of which it is one of the chief treasures. The Comte de Pefieranda, Spanish Plenipotentiary at the Imperial Court, took Terborch with him to Spain, and he there had an opportunity of studying Velasquez. The Dutch master was again in Holland in 1650. In 1654 he settled down at Deventer, and it is there that he elaborated the style of his maturity, and produced those studies of Dutch life and manners which have won for him his greatest fame. Though Terborch had thus exceptional opportunities for studying the greatest masters of his own and earlier times, he was in no sense an eclectic. He developed his own artistic personality and his own style quite consistently, though he was undoubtedly aided by the great examples before him. If Terborch has not the dramatic intention or the finesse of observation of Metau, he far surpasses him as a colourist. In this respect Terborch is indeed supreme among the "small masters" of his time. In freshness and delicacy, in reticent and subtle harmony, above all in the inventiveness of his colour-schemes he stands alone. He is sometimes less than happy in his combination of single figures and studies, which have already done duty elsewhere, into compositions of a genre character.

TIZIANO (TIZIANO VERELLIO).

Venetian School. Called Tiziano and (in England) Titian. Born at Pieve di Cadore, in Friuli, in 1477. Died at Venice on the 29th August, 1576. Developed in the school of Giovanni and Gentile Bellini, and above all under the influence of Giorgione, his contemporary. Titian collaborated with the latter in the frescoes of the Fondaco de' Tedeschi, now almost entirely effaced. In 1511 he painted three frescoes in the Scuola del Santo of Padua, still in the style common to Giorgione and himself in the first decade of the 16th century. Typical works of the early time are the "Three Ages," of the Bridgewater Gallery, the falsely named "Sacred and Profane Love," of the Borghese Gallery, and the "St. Mark Enthroned, with Saints," which is in the Sacristy of the Santa Maria della Salute at Venice. Titian's growing fame attracted the attention of Alfonso I., Duke of Ferrara, for whom he painted the "Cristo della Moneta," of the Dresden Gallery, the "Worship of Venus" and "Bacchanal," of the Prado Gallery at Madrid, and the "Bacchus and Ariadne," of the National Gallery. 1518 saw the completion, and the setting up on the high altar of the Frari at Venice, of the great Assunta or Assumption of the Virgin. To the year 1526 belongs the Pesaro altar-piece, still in the Frari, and to 1528 the "St. Peter Martyr," painted for the chapel of that saint in the church of SS. Giovanni e Paolo, and which was very generally cited by his biographers as Titian's masterpiece. It perished in a fire which destroyed the sacristy of the church in August, 1867. In 1532, on the occasion of his second visit to Bologna, Titian painted Charles V., and this proved to be the beginning of a connection with the Royal house of Spain which lasted as long as life. He painted the Farnese Pope, Paul III., a first time at Bologna in 1543, and again in 1545 at Rome, on the occasion of his only visit to the Eternal City. The finest original from Titian's own hand representing this pontiff, is the unfinished piece in the Naples Gallery, in which he appears with Cardinal Farnese and Ottavio Farnese, his relations. In 1548, the master proceeded to Augsburg and there painted the incomparable equestrian portrait of Charles V. now in the Prado Gallery, as well as another portrait now in the Alte Pinakothek at Munich. Among the many great works of the later time executed for Philip II.—a large proportion of them dedicated to the worship of sensuous beauty—may be mentioned the "Venus and Adonis" of the Prado, the "Diana and Calisto," and "Diana and Actæon" of the Bridgewater Gallery, the "Perseus and Andromeda" of this collection, the "Rape of Europa," formerly in the Earl of Darnley's collection at Cobham, and the "Jupiter and Antiope," or "Venere del Pardo" of the Louvre. The sacred works of the latest stage in the wonderful life of a century less a few months, are marked by a more sombre passion, by a greater intensity than those which preceded them. Among these may be cited the "Ecce Homo" of Munich, which is a later version of the picture in the Louvre, and the "Pietà" of the Accademia delle Belle Arti at Venice, left unfinished at the master's death and completed by Palma Giovane. The "Education of Cupid" at the Borghese Gallery, and the still later "Nymph and Shepherd" of the Imperial Gallery at Vienna, are among the last productions of the artist's brush devoted to the glorification of feminine loveliness. Titian, in the first section of his career, brought to perfection the Giorgionesque phase of Venetian art; his middle time represented at its height the splendour and the dignity of the full Renaissance; the art of his last period while, on the one hand it embodied in mythological subjects a lower and more sensuous ideal of humanity and of poetry, was marked, on the other, by a sombre fire and an intense conviction, by a sentiment of awe and almost of fear, in the treatment of sacred subjects, which answered to, and emanated from, the Catholic Revival.

The original work, one of the most notable productions of the late time, was formerly at Cobham, but is now in the collection of Mrs. J. Gardner at Boston, U.S.A. A copy by Rubens, of the same size as the original, is in the Prado Gallery at Madrid. This very fine copy on a reduced scale reproduces with singular fidelity the beauty and charm of the original. By Crowe and Cavalcaselle it has been tentatively attributed to the pupil and son-in-law of Velazquez, Juan Bantista del Mazo.

Painted for Philip II., about 1562, and highly lauded by Vasari in the "Vite." It was in the Orleans Gallery, and was then engraved by T. L. Delignon. With the other Italian pictures belonging to this famous collection, it was sold in London in 1798, and was then purchased by Mr. Bryan, the picture-dealer. The "Perseus and Andromeda," which has been hidden away and lost to the world since the first years of the nineteenth century, now for the first time takes its place in the Wallace Collection. In Sir Abraham Hume's "Notices of the Life and Works of Titian (London: Rodwell, 1829), the "Perseus and Andromeda" is mentioned as having come into the Orleans Gallery from the collection of M. de la Vrillière, and as having been previously with the "Rape of Europa" in the gallery of Christina, Queen of Sweden; but further research tends to show that the originals of these pictures were never in that collection. At the date of publication of this work (1829) the picture was in the possession of the then Marquis of Hertford. It was mentioned by Dr. Waagen as a Paolo Veronese painted under the influence of Titian, and since his time has been completely forgotten. The life-size contemporary copy at the Hermitage in St. Petersburg was there for many years classed as a Tintoretto, but has in the later catalogues been restored to Titian. Among other Venetian pictures which are based on this work may be mentioned the "Perseus delivering Andromeda," of Palma Giovane, in the gallery at Cassel, and the painting of the same subject, by Paolo Veronese (or a painter of his school), in the Museum of Rennes in France.

TROY (JEAN-FRANÇOIS DE).

French School. Born at Paris in 1679. Died at Rome on the 24th January, 1752. Pupil of his father, the portrait-painter François de Troy. He went to Italy at the age of twenty, and remained there until 1706. He was received by the Académie Royale on the 28th July, 1708, and was in 1719 appointed professor. To the year 1727 belong his rivalry with Le Moine—another master of monumental decoration—and the competition in which he divided the prize with his rival. In 1728 he decorated the apartments of the financier, Samuel Bernard, and in the succeeding year completed thirty-six compositions for the hôtel of M. de la Live. Finding that the art of Watteau and the other painters of Fêtes Galantes was more and more gaining ground, De Troy boldly and successfully cast aside the ideals of the age of Louis Quatorze, and adopted the new style, producing in it such charming things as the "Déjeuner d'Huitres" of the Condé Museum at Chantilly, "La Surprise," in the Jones collection at the Victoria and Albert Museum, and the "Conversation Galante" in the Palace of Sans Souci, near Potsdam. He took part in the decoration, in this style, of the Petits Cabinets at Versailles. In 1738 De Troy was appointed Director of the Académie de France at Rome. Among his most considerable achievements are oil paintings executed as the designs for two great series of Gobelins tapestries, "The History of Queen Esther" and "The History of Medea and Jason." Those for the former series were exhibited at the Salons of 1737, 1738, 1740, and 1742; those for the latter at the Salon of 1748. Admirably preserved sets of these tapestries exist in the state apartments at Windsor Castle. A complete of the "Medea and Jason" series is owned by Lord Burton. The Académie de France at Rome has a perfect set of the "History of Queen Esther." De Troy, thinking that he had causes of complaint against the court, demanded his recall, which, to his great surprise and disgust, was conceded. When he was reluctantly making preparations to leave Rome he was overtaken by an illness, to which he succumbed. Important works by De Troy, other than those above mentioned, are to be found in the Louvre, the provincial museums of Angers and Nancy, and the Hermitage of St. Petersburg.

Sèvres, in 1817 and there received some lessons from Biocreux. In the course of his wanderings in search of landscape motives, he met Roqueplan, who gave him valuable advice and assisted in the development of his art. He first exhibited at the Salon in 1833. Taking up his quarters in the year 1842 in Paris, he found himself in the midst of a brilliant group of landscape painters, forming a school whose achievements have not been surpassed—if, indeed they have been equalled—by the Dutch masters of the 17th century. Among these were Decamps, Rousseau, J. Dupré, Millet, Daubigny, Diaz, Huet, François, and Harpignies. Troyon began his career as a landscape painter pure and simple, but, after studying Paul Potter's works, developed, from the year 1848 onwards, an unsuspected capacity for cattle painting. It is in the combination of cattle with landscape, so as to make an integral whole, in which the one element of the picture cannot be conceived without the other, that Troyon is supreme. In this respect he surpasses even Paul Potter, while the Dutch master is greatly his superior in the individualisation, and what may be called the dramatic characterisation, of cattle and domestic animals. A comparison of the two eminent painters in the same class of subject can be made in the galleries of Hertford House. Two of Troyon's masterpieces are the "Vallée de la Toucque," formerly in the Goldschmidt collection, and the "Boeufs se rendant au Labour" (1855), in the Louvre.

TURNER (JOSEPH MALLORD WILLIAM), R.A.

British School. Born on the 23rd April, 1775, in Maiden Lane, Covent Garden. Died at Chelsea on the 19th December, 1851. Turner was the friend and fellow-student of Girtin, the water colour painter, and owed much to the example of John Robert Cozens. He profited greatly by the opportunities afforded for copying a collection of drawings in the possession of Dr. Munro, of the Adelphi. Turner entered as a student of the Royal Academy in 1789, he was elected an A.R.A. in 1799, and in 1802 became a full R.A. In this year he visited France and Switzerland. In 1807 he began to publish his "Liber Studiorum," a series of designs in mezzotint and etching, done in emulation of Claude Lorrain's "Liber Veritatis," though not with the object, fulfilled by the last-named series, of authenticating pictures already painted. In 1812 Turner built himself a house, 47, Queen Anne Street, in which he had a gallery where for many years he exhibited a selection of his pictures. He visited Italy three times : in 1819, in 1829, and again about 1840. He died unmarried under an assumed name in an obscure lodging at Chelsea, and was buried by the side of Sir Joshua Reynolds, in the crypt of St. Paul's Cathedral. His large fortune, both in pictures and funded property, he bequeathed to his country : the finished pictures being given to the nation, on condition that the Government should provide suitable accommodation for them within ten years; the funded property going towards the establishment of an institution for the benefit of decayed artists. Ruskin divides Turner's career, irrespective of his student's days, into five periods. The first comprises, according to him, the years between 1800 and 1810 ; the second those between 1810 and 1820 ; the third those between 1820 and 1830 ; the fourth those between 1830 and 1840 ; the fifth and last period those between 1840 and 1850. For general purposes, however, the career may be divided into three great styles. The first period is one of careful notation of natural fact, of sombre grandeur, of dignity and reserve. The second period shows the master interpreting, still with well-restrained emotion, the beauties of his native country, as well as of Switzerland and Italy, indulging on occasion in the highest finish, and greatly developing his power and variety as a colourist. To this phase of his art belongs the brilliant yet mistaken imitation, or emulation, of Claude Lorrain, in such works as the "Dido building Carthage," and other similar canvases in the National Gallery. We find him in the third and greatest period rising to heights hardly attained by any other landscape painter, and standing alone in the lyrical interpretation of nature, in the conception and realisation of dream-visions as sad and awe-inspiring as they are radiantly beautiful. It is not safe to judge this period of Turner's career exclusively from the oil paintings, as even the greatest of these have been to a certain extent impaired by a process of disintegration resulting from the hazardous experiments of his technique. The finest of the water-colours alone give an adequate notion of what he attempted and achieved in this the greatest phase of his wonderful career.

VELAZQUEZ (DIEGO VELAZQUEZ DE SILVA, known as VELAZQUEZ).

Spanish School. Born at Seville and baptized there on the 6th June, 1599. Died at Madrid on the 7th August, 1660. Pupil of Francisco Herrera, the Elder, at Seville, and then of Francisco Pacheco in the same city; further developed under the influence of Il Greco's pupil Luis Tristan, and, as it is said, also of Ribera. The latter master had, however, left Spain in his youth, and in the early time of his younger contemporary his pictures could not have been common at Seville. Velazquez, who had married Pacheco's daughter Juana, paid a visit in 1622 to Madrid. He was invited to return to the capital by the Count-Duke of Olivares, and by him presented to Philip IV., then a young man of something less than his own age. The king very soon afterwards appointed him Court Painter. In 1629 Velazquez paid his first visit to Italy, spending a year in Rome and some time in Naples. His style was developed, but not in any sense radically altered, by the contemplation and study of the great Italian masters. A second journey to Italy was undertaken in 1648, and it is to this period that belongs the wonderful portrait of Pope Innocent X. now in the Panfili-Doria Palace at Rome, and studies for which exist in the Hermitage at St. Petersburg and at Apsley House. On his return the King created him Aposentador Mayor or quarter-master, and decorated him with the cross of Sant' Iago. In execution of the duties belonging to this onerous office, he followed the King to Irun in 1660, on the occasion of the marriage of Louis XIV. with Philip's daughter, the Infanta Maria Theresa, and it is in consequence of his exertions on this occasion that he was seized with the sickness which, on his return to Madrid, proved mortal. In a Gobelin's tapestry, designed by Lebrun, with a representation of the marriage ceremony, and showing the two monarchs with their courtiers grouped opposite each other, Velazquez is depicted in the suite of Philip. The first phase of the great Spanish master's art is one of naïve and unassuming realism. It is represented by the "Aguador" and another similar work at Apsley House, and by canvases in the Prado, the National Gallery, the Hermitage, and the collection of Sir Francis Cook. The masterpiece of the second manner, which may be taken to end with the second Italian journey, is "Las Lanzas" or "The Surrender of Breda," in the Prado Gallery; and to this time belong also the magnificent equestrian portraits of Philip IV., Don Baltasar Carlos, and the Conde-Duque de Olivares, in the same place. The last and greatest manner is illustrated by such world-famous pieces as "Las Meninas" ("The Maids of Honour"), "Las Hilanderas" ("The Carpet Manufactory of Santa Isabel de Madrid"), the "Æsop," and the "Menippus." Velazquez, if not the greatest genius or the most various artist of all time, is the greatest master of the brush that the world has seen. In inventiveness and authority of design in modes the most unconventional and the most personal to the artist; in force, directness, and concision of representation; in supreme certainty and accomplishment of execution, he is without a rival. His prosaic surroundings, and his mode of life at a Court in which a freezing etiquette reigned supreme, compelled him to confine his art within certain rigidly fixed boundaries. Even in portraiture he was absolutely reserved and objective, and only on some few exceptional occasions coloured his wonderful presentments with full human warmth and vivacity. To the regions of the imagination in which the greatest of the Italian masters dwelt, to the highest phases of sacred art, in which they had shown themselves supreme, Velazquez but seldom aspired, and never with complete success. The Museum of the Prado at Madrid contains all the most important masterpieces of Velazquez, and it is there alone that his art can be completely studied and understood. The Imperial Gallery at Vienna, the National Gallery, the Wallace Collection, the Dresden Gallery, the Louvre, the Munich Gallery, the Berlin Gallery, the Stædel Institut at Frankfurt, the Pitti Palace, the Museum of the Capitol, the Estense Gallery at Modena, and the Hermitage of St. Petersburg possess examples from his brush. Among the relatively few great works by Velazquez to be found in private collections may be mentioned the "Innocent X." in the Doria Palace at Rome, the "Portrait of an Unknown Gentleman" at Apsley House, the "Philip IV." and "Conde Duque de Olivares" at Dorchester House, the "Venus with the Mirror" in the Morritt Collection at Rokeby Park, the "Femme à l'Eventail" here, and the "Lady in the Mantilla," in the Duke of Devonshire's Collection at Devonshire House.

This does not appear to be, as has been assumed, a study for the "Boar Hunt" No. 197 in the National Gallery. It represents the same space in the forest region enclosed for the royal sport, but shows a much less animated composition, of which only the left half and the landscape agree precisely with that of the National Gallery picture. The hand, practised as it is, cannot be that of the master himself, as we see it in the much injured but authentic canvas of the National Gallery. Moreover the picture in the Wallace Collection suggests rather a reduced and simplified replica than a spontaneous sketch for a larger work.

VELDE (ADRIAEN VAN DE).

Dutch School. Born at Amsterdam in 1635 or 1636 ; died there on the 21st January, 1672. Pupil of his father, the marine painter, William van de Velde, the Elder, at Amsterdam, and afterwards of Jan Wynants and Philips Wouwerman at Haarlem. Further developed under the influence of Paul Potter. Adriaen van de Velde practised his art chiefly at Amsterdam. He was, notwithstanding a certain element of coldness and over-deliberation in his execution, one of the most accomplished painters of landscape, cattle, and figures that Holland produced during the great period of the 17th century. In small pieces his art is of the subtlest in the suggestion of atmospheric gradations ; in vast canvases such as those in the Wallace Collection and the FitzWilliam Museum at Cambridge, he appears relatively frigid and hard. Adriaen van de Velde painted figures in the pictures of Jacob van Ruysdael, Hobbema, Van der Heyden, Hackaert, and others.

VELDE (WILLEM VAN DE), the Younger.

Dutch School. Born at Amsterdam in 1633. Died at Greenwich on the 6th April, 1707. Pupil of his father, Willem van de Velde, the Elder, and of Simon de Vlieger. The younger of these marine painters was up to 1677, and again temporarily in 1686, at Amsterdam. After 1677 both father and son were established in England in the service of the English Crown ; to each of them being granted a pension of £100 per annum—to the father “for taking and making draughts of sea-fights,” to the son for “putting the said draughts into colours.” Both lived at Greenwich, the father dying there in 1693, the son in 1707. The father executed a great number of pen-and-ink drawings, of which some are in the Ryks-Museum at Amsterdam ; but no painting has hitherto been recognised with certainty as his. The younger Van de Velde, though he does not equal Van de Cappelle in breadth and delicacy of aerial effect or in poetic charm, is incomparable in the accuracy of his draughtsmanship and the authority of his composition, and very happy too, notwithstanding a characteristic hardness, in the notation of atmospheric conditions, and especially in the rendering of masses of white sunlit cloud hanging heavy in skies of pale blue.

VENETIAN SCHOOL (EARLY 16TH CENTURY).

No. 19. Venus disarming Cupid. Gallery XVI.

3 ft. 7½ in. h. by 3 ft. w.

Formerly in the Orleans Gallery as a Giorgione, and then engraved by De Longueil and L. M. Halbou. Again sold in 1834 with the collection of Charles O'Neil, Esq., under the same name, for the price of 90 guineas.

This picture has hitherto been classed in the Wallace Collection as by Giorgione. It stands midway in style between that master and Titian in his Giorgionesque phase; but with all the beauty of the characteristically Venetian colour and the noble simplicity of design, it is too weak in construction and, especially in the landscape, too empty in execution, to be by either the one or the other of these great masters. The Venus, the Cupid, and the landscape-background approximate more closely in type to the productions of Titian in his early style than to the best authenticated works of Giorgione.

VERNET (CLAUDE-JOSEPH).

French School. Born at Avignon on the 14th August, 1714. Died in Paris, at his studio in the Louvre, on the 3rd December, 1789. Pupil of his father, Antoine Vernet, and of the Roman painter, Bernardino Fergioni. Joseph Vernet set out at the age of 18 for Italy, and then seeing the sea for the first time experienced a profound artistic emotion, which revealed to him his true vocation in painting. At Rome he studied the ruins and landscapes in the environs of the Eternal City, as well as the costumes of the higher and lower class and the people. Soon the "Tempests," the "Calms," the "Moonlight Scenes," which were the outcome of these studies became the fashion in Rome. He was recalled to France after an absence of 20 years, and arrived in Paris in 1753. He was received at the Académie Royale on the 23rd August of that same year. Shortly afterwards the King gave him the order to paint the celebrated series of marine pictures, "Les Ports de France," which occupied him during a period of nine years. The principal canvases of this series are now in the Louvre.

VERNET (ÉMILE-JEAN-HORACE, called Horace Vernet).

French School. Son of Carle and grandson of Joseph Vernet. Born in Paris, at his father's studio in the Louvre, in 1789; died in the same city on the 17th January, 1863. Horace Vernet's career was one of extraordinary brilliancy and material success, both artistically and socially. He had at first identified himself with the Bonapartist régime and the spirit of the Revolution, but afterwards became the special protégé of the Orleans branch of the French Royal Family. In 1828 he was appointed Director of the Académie de France at Rome, and remained there until 1834. He then paid a visit to Algeria. Versailles having, by decree of Louis-Philippe, been converted in 1833 into an historical museum, that monarch confided to Horace Vernet many gigantic tasks, including the execution of vast canvases representing the battles of Jena, Friedland, and Wagram. He next proceeded, by invitation of the Czar, to Russia, and then, returning to France, was in 1837 sent officially to Algiers to obtain material for illustrating the series of battles which culminated in the taking of Constantine. The "Prise de la Smala" (1844) of the Versailles Gallery, one of the most colossal canvases ever carried out by a single painter, was among the pictures produced as the result of this visit. Biblical scenes, of which there are examples in this collection, were treated by Vernet in the modern spirit and in the modern Arab costume, a practice which he defended before the Academy with the aid of evidence gathered during his residence in the East and in Africa. During the last period of his career Vernet began to feel himself at a disadvantage in the competition with his younger and more gifted contemporaries. In these years he painted, among other things, scenes of the Crimean War, including the "Battle of the Alma." Horace Vernet was, as a painter, capable, various, and indefatigable, but never inspired with the lyrical enthusiasm of the Romantics or with the passion for truth that distinguished the realists of the higher type who grew up in the later years of his career. His chief rewards were reaped during his life-time. Posterity has only partially ratified the verdict of his contemporaries. The Museum of Versailles contains Horace Vernet's vastest and most important works. Of the smaller compositions, the Wallace Collection has the most complete and varied series.

WATTEAU (ANTOINE).

French School. Born at Valenciennes in 1684. Died at Nogent, near Vincennes, on the 18th July, 1721. Pupil first of an obscure painter at Valenciennes, then of Métayer, and afterwards of Claude Gillot. Watteau, on leaving Métayer, entered the service of a manufacturer of coarse daubs destined for the provinces and for exportation. His particular task was to constantly repeat a "Saint Nicolas," which he got to know by heart. He next entered the studio of Claude Gillot, a painter, designer, and draughtsman of a sprightly and original fancy, and himself an innovator. It was the example of this artist which directed his attention to the scenes of the Italian comedy and to schemes of fanciful and brilliant decoration. According to Caylus, Gillot and Watteau parted on bad terms. Watteau found a new home with Claude Audran, the Keeper of the Luxembourg, and one of the first decorative draughtsmen of his day. There he had great opportunities for the study of Rubens, whose art, dissimilar as it was to his in its essence, exercised a great and enduring influence on that of the Valenciennes painter. The beautiful gardens of the Luxembourg, less formal than those of the other royal palaces, left a deep impress on Watteau's landscape art. His two earliest extant paintings are supposed to be the "Départ de Troupe" (or "Recrue Allant Joindre le Régiment") and the "Halte d'Armée." These were the first of a series of military pictures on a small scale. Nevertheless, such genre pieces, based entirely on Flemish models, as the "Boors Rejoicing" (or "La Vraie Gaieté") in the collection of Sir Charles Tennant, and the "Laveuse de Vaisselle" in the Municipal Gallery at Strassburg, may well belong to a still earlier period. On his return from a journey to Valenciennes the artist took up his abode with Sirois, the dealer. In 1712 he came into contact with Crozat, and enjoyed unrivalled opportunities for the study of his great collection of paintings and drawings by old masters. It was then that Watteau, made acquainted with the Venetian masters of the sixteenth century, and with their example before him, completely developed the finer and more poetic side of his art. If in his colour-schemes and the general arrangement of his pictures he owes much to Paolo Veronese, his mode of conception shows a natural affinity to that of Giorgione and the painters of his immediate group. There are to be detected throughout his life-work, from this point onwards, traces of the direct influence of this collection of paintings and drawings upon his development. He became himself, in his studies from nature, executed very frequently in three chalks, the greatest and most expressive draughtsman of the eighteenth century. He was received by the Académie Royale on the 28th August, 1717, the work presented and accepted on that occasion being the famous "Embarquement pour Cythère," now in the Louvre, and of which a more finished and elaborate but less charming version exists in the Royal Palace at Berlin. Watteau, whose health had never been robust, developed at this period a restlessness and irritability peculiar to the phthisical temperament. He left Sirois and set up house with a new friend, the artist Nicolas Wleughels. On the 3rd September, 1720, he writes to his patron, M. de Julienne, with regard to the "Rendez-Vous de Chasse" in this collection, the canvas of which he finds himself compelled to enlarge on the right side. A little later on, in this same year, he passed over to England, hoping thus to remedy the disordered state of his affairs. The climate of London had, as it would appear, a disastrous effect on his already shattered constitution. Returning some time before the beginning of February, 1721 (see Lady Dilke: "French Painters of the 18th Century"), he took up his quarters with his faithful friend, Gersaint. It was then that as a pictorial exercise he painted that incomparably brilliant improvisation, the "Enseigne de Gersaint," which is now, in two separate sections, preserved in the Royal Palace at Berlin. Watteau, becoming more and more restless, left his kind host, and settled down in a lodging at Nogent, near Vincennes, procured for him by the Abbé Haranger, Canon of Saint Germain l'Auxerrois. Here he expired in the arms of his devoted friend, Gersaint, on the 18th July, 1721. One of the last pieces upon which he was engaged was a "Christ on the Cross surrounded by Angels." His little fortune of 9,000 livres was divided among his four dearest friends, M. de Julienne, l'Abbe Haranger, Henin, and Gersaint. A noble record of the artist's life-work was published in 1734, by M. de Julienne, in the shape of a colossal Recueil in two magnificent volumes under the title "L'Oeuvre d'Antoine Watteau, Peintre du Roi en son Académie Royale de Peinture et Sculpture. Gravé d'après ses tableaux et dessins originaux tirés du Cabinet du Roi et des plus curieux de l'Europe. Par les soins de M. de Julienne." The engravers were Tardieu, B. Audran, C. N. Cochin, Thomassin, Thomassin fils, Laurent Cars, De Larmessin, Le Bas, Lépicié, Aveline, T. M. Liotard, and others. This work contains, in addition to a great series of well-known things, reproductions of a considerable number of paintings which have either perished, or have hitherto remained unrecognised. Watteau was not only the inventor and the head of the charming school of painters of Fêtes Galantes and the most exquisite colourist among the French artists of the eighteenth century. He was the true poet-painter whose temperament unconsciously coloured all that he produced, transfiguring by the magic of the imagination the elegant frivolities of his time and country into shadowy dreams of amorous dalliance, the very gaiety of which is tempered by an atmosphere of melancholy and remoteness. The most important collections of his works are to be found in the Museum and the Royal Palace of Berlin, and the Palaces in and near Potsdam; in the Louvre and the Musée Condé at Chantilly; in the Wallace Collection; in the Hermitage at St. Petersburg; in the Dresden Gallery; the Prado at Madrid; the Dulwich Gallery, the National Gallery of Scotland; and some private collections in France and England. Among these last may be cited those of M. Camille Groult, Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, Baron Edmond de Rothschild, and the Comtesse de Miranda (Madame Christine Nilsson), in Paris; those of the Earl of Northbrook, Mr. Alfred de Rothschild, Lord Leconfield, and Mr. Julius Wernher in London and elsewhere in England.

WEENIX (JAN BAPTIST, often, from his mode of signature, called Giovanni Battista Weenix).

Dutch School. Born at Amsterdam in 1621. Died at Ter Mey, near Utrecht in 1660. Pupil, first of Jan Micker, then of Abraham Blomaert at Utrecht, and of Claes Moeyaert at Amsterdam. He visited Italy, and resided in that country between 1642 and 1646, chiefly at Rome. Returning to Amsterdam, he remained there until 1649, after which he fixed his residence definitively at Utrecht and at Ter Mey in its neighbourhood. Jan Baptist Weenix, while dwelling in Italy, studied especially the sea-coast and the people, the result of his observation being the stately scenes, half conventional, half real, of which good examples are to be found in the Wallace Collection. He painted also, in his later years, dead game and fruit and flowers, though the subjects of this class, properly to be ascribed to him, and not to his son, are less numerous than was formerly imagined. An example of this type is No. 1611 in the Ryks-Museum at Amsterdam. A "Poultry Yard among Ruins," signed by him, is No. 1620 in the Dresden Gallery. In the Episcopal Palace at Würzburg is a "Piece with Dead Game" by Giovanni Battista. An admirable toilet scene from his brush, "A Lady at her Mirror," is in the Brussels Gallery.

WEENIX (JAN).

Dutch School. Born at Amsterdam in 1640; died there on the 20th September, 1719. Pupil of his father, Jan Baptist Weenix, and fellow pupil of his cousin, Melchior de Hondecoeter. His father died when he was twenty years old, but even then the younger artist had so entirely assimilated his style that his early works are often confused with those of Giovanni Battista. Jan Weenix, though he was domiciled at Amsterdam, was from 1664 to 1668 at Utrecht, and from 1702 to 1712 at Bensberg, near Düsseldorf, in the employment of Johann Wilhelm, Elector of the Palatinate. He had not the energy or the dramatic force shown by Melchior de Hondecoeter in the representation of live birds and their habits, but surpassed him in the finish as in the harmony of his decorative arrangements of dead game and still-life. His colour is somewhat less hot than that of the master just named. Jan Weenix preferred, as a rule, to represent dead game and birds, while Hondecoeter was at his best when he depicted the flutter and fury of the poultry yard in moments of exceptional excitement. The Wallace Collection contains an unsurpassed series of works by Jan Weenix. This is only approached by the series of twelve canvases in the Alte Pinakothek of Munich, which includes, however, his masterpiece the vast game-piece with a striking view, in the background, of the Château of Bensberg.

WERFF (ADRIAEN VAN DER).

Dutch School. Born at Kralingen, near Rotterdam, on the 21st January, 1659. Died at Rotterdam on the 12th November, 1722. Pupil of Eglon van der Neer. Van der Werff had his domicile at Rotterdam, but after 1696 was very frequently at Düsseldorf, as Court Painter of Johann Wilhelm, Elector of the Palatinate. This prince conferred on him the honour of knighthood, and we find the painter, as a consequence, signing himself on occasion "Chevalier van Werff." The cold, porcelain-like colour and mechanical finish of this artist in the treatment of the nude are much less appreciated by modern connoisseurs than they were by his contemporaries. Still his general accomplishment and the certainty of his execution, in a vicious and wholly conventional style, are not to be denied. Van der Werff enjoyed the greatest success during his life-time; his works being eagerly sought after and commanding very high prices. The most considerable collections of his paintings are in the Alte Pinakothek of Munich and the Dresden Gallery.

WILKIE (SIR DAVID), R.A.

British School. Born in the parish of Culter, Fifeshire, on the 18th November, 1785. Died on board the Oriental steamer, off Gibraltar, on the 1st June, 1841. He was placed in 1799 in the Trustees' Academy at Edinburgh, where he won the prize for the best painting of "Calisto in the Bath of Diana." He came to London in 1806 and became a student at the Royal Academy. His "Village Politicians," exhibited there in 1806, attracted general attention. To this earlier time belong some of his most popular genre pictures, such as "The Blind Fiddler," "Rent Day," "The Cut Finger." He was elected an Associate in 1809, and a Royal Academician in 1811. To the period between 1811 and 1825 belong "Blind Man's Buff," "The Letter of Introduction," "Distraint for Rent," "The Rabbit on the Wall," "The Penny Wedding," "The Reading of the Will," and "Chelsea Pensioners." In 1825 Wilkie made a tour through France, Germany, Italy, and Spain, and there made a careful study of the old masters, and especially of Correggio, Rembrandt, and Velazquez. He then broadened his style, and treated historical subjects and portraiture in preference to genre, one of his chief works in this second manner being the "John Knox Preaching," painted in 1832, and now in the National Gallery. Several life-size full-lengths, in which the effort to obtain breadth and mastery on this scale is painfully apparent, are in the collection at Apsley House. Wilkie cannot be said to have added to his fame by this forced development of his art, the result rather of ambition than of true inclination. The peculiarities of his technique, in the later period of his career, have caused an alarming deterioration in many of his paintings of that period. On the death of Sir Thomas Lawrence in 1830, Wilkie was appointed in his place Painter-in-Ordinary to the King, a post which he already filled in Scotland in succession to Sir Henry Raeburn. He was knighted in 1836. In the autumn of 1840 he undertook a tour in the East, going from Constantinople to the Holy Land and Egypt. He expired on board the Oriental steamer, off Gibraltar, and his body was consigned with due honours to the deep. This scene has been commemorated by Turner in a famous picture "The Burial of Wilkie," now in the National Gallery. Wilkie's true province is humorous genre based on the closest and most sympathetic observation of types and manners, and happily preserving the individual in the type. His touch, when he confines himself to the scale best suited to it, combines sharpness and breadth with the highest finish.

WINTERHALTER (FRANÇOIS-XAVIER).

German School. Born at Baden-Baden in 1806. Died in 1873. He studied at Munich and Rome, and in 1834 established himself in Paris, where he became the Painter-in-Ordinary of Louis-Philippe, and afterwards of Napoleon III. Winterhalter in this development of his style became to all intents and purposes a French painter, and he would, perhaps, be classed more properly as belonging to the French than to the German School. He painted not a few portraits of Her Majesty the Queen, of the late Prince Consort, and other members of the Royal Family.

WITTE (EMANUEL DE).

Dutch School. Born, probably at Alkmaar, in 1617. Died at Amsterdam in 1692. Pupil of Evert van Aelst at Delft. He practised his art at Alkmaar, Rotterdam, Delft, and finally, after 1656, at Amsterdam. De Witte is pre-eminent among the Dutch masters of the 17th century as the painter of church interiors peopled by sombre crowds of worshippers, and seen in a luminous half-gloom traversed with bands of bright light. His style in the treatment of these subjects is absolutely opposed to that of the somewhat earlier painters of the Flemish School, Steenwyck the Younger and Pieter Neeffs the Elder, who obtained their chief effects by accuracy of linear perspective, while De Witte realised his by broad and masterly chiaroscuro. In his treatment of colour and light and shade he shows some affinity to Pieter de Hooch.

WOUWERMAN (PHILIPS).

Dutch School. Baptized at Haarlem, on the 24th May, 1619; died there on the 19th May, 1668. Pupil of his father, Paulus Joosten Wouwerman, of Frans Hals, Pieter Verbeeck, and Jan Wynants, perhaps also of Pieter de Laer. Philips Wouwerman practised almost exclusively at Haarlem. His art, which is technically of great subtlety and beauty, shows a curious mixture of delicate realism and close observation of nature on the one hand, of conventionality in the conception and arrangement of his figure-subjects on the other. The relation of these vivacious groups to the scenes which they fill with their restless movement is not always a natural and inevitable one, leading the onlooker unconsciously to accept the compositions as a whole, one and indivisible. Wouwerman excels particularly in rendering skies of tender blue in which heavy white cumuli hang suspended, and undulating hillocks of silver-grey sand tipped with pale light. The Hermitage at St. Petersburg, the Dresden Gallery, the Louvre, the National Gallery, and the Wallace Collection, among other public collections, contain fine groups of Philips Wouwerman's works. Among the private collections of England, that of the Duke of Wellington, at Apsley House, is one of the richest in this respect.

WYNANTS (JAN).

Dutch School. Born between 1615 and 1620 at Haarlem. Died probably at Amsterdam after 1682. Little is at present known of his life or artistic training. He married in 1660 at Amsterdam, and settled there. The dates on his pictures range from 1641 to 1679. Wynants would appear to have exercised considerable influence on the contemporary landscape painters whose art had its origin at Haarlem. The figures in his pictures were inserted for him by Philips Wouwerman while he resided at Haarlem, by Adriaen van de Velde and Lingelbach during his life at Amsterdam.

ZIEM (FELIX).

French School. Born at Beaune in 1822. Educated at the art school of Dijon. He is chiefly a painter of marine and architectural subjects in combination, but more especially of Venice and Constantinople. He revels in gorgeous combinations of blue waters, gay shipping, and splendid architecture, realising effects of a showy and brilliant if also of a somewhat superficial and scenic character, but failing to approach the greater modern painters—such as Turner and Bonington—who have taken Venice as their theme.
